Why Is It So Hot? Here Is the Official Answer

A CLEAR sky has allowed every bit of heat from the sun to reach us during the last few days. Besides, this is Summer time, and we must expect it to be hot. There is no permanent relief in sight. Occasional showers may cool the air from time to time.—Forecaster Smith's official explanation, given out to-day.

BRISK BREEZE BRINGS RELIEF IN HOT WAVE

Mercury Which Reached 94 Degrees Yesterday Down in Seventies.

FOUR DIE OF SUFFERINGS

Temporary relief from the extreme heat of yesterday was carried to Boston today on a brisk northwest wind that sprang up early in the day.

The mercury, which started at 73 degrees, rose to 76 in the early afternoon, but the heat did not approach in intensity that of yesterday.

The maximum temperature in Boston yesterday was ninety-four degrees. This figure was registered by reliable thermometers at 1 o'clock. For six days previous, the weather was sufficiently cool to close manner hotels which had opened at the usual time, make open trolley cars too cold for comfort and bring joy to the heart of the coal dealers. So sudden was the change in temperature yesterday that four persons died from heat prostration and scores were overcome by the heat and received treatment at the various city hospitals.

The dead are:

Charles Hayden, aged seventy-five, No. 50 Chadwick street, Roxbury.

Alexander Fisher, aged eighty-nine, No. 6 Central square, East Boston.

Eugene Callahan, aged thirty, No. 263 Washington street, Malden.

John Conway, aged fifty, home unknown.

All four were stricken after a comparatively short time upon the streets. The glare of the sun in the open was almost unendurable and in the down-town district during the day a large number of shoppers and business people were overcome. The hospitals were all prepared for the emergency, however, and prompt ambulance service and heroic treatment doubtless saved many from complete exhaustion.

The prospect for continued hot weather to-day looks promising—or disappointing, according to one's point of view. The hot wave is here to stay, for a few days at least, and cooler hats and shadow coats will be in great demand all along the Shopping Way. The prophets who warned us that there would be no Summer this year have missed their guess again, for it is certain that even if there were to be no more warm weather the intensity and sudden descent of yesterday's spell would provide a thoroughly real if brief Summer day.

NIGHT SESSION FOR VOTERS OF SOMERVILLE

To afford an opportunity to Somerville men who are employed during the day and who desire to change their political registration in preparation for the approaching primaries, the office of the Somerville city clerk will be open to-night between the hours of 7 and 8 o'clock.

Even in Somerville, it is said, conservative as is that enviable community, there are voters who, disgusted with the treatment that the older parties have dealt out to the common people, feel this year like getting in line with something like the Independence League.

A committee from the League will be on hand at the Somerville city clerk's office this evening from 7 until 8 o'clock.

This will be the one and only opportunity AT NIGHT for the Somerville voter to file notice of his intention to transfer his affiliation from one party to another.

Miners' Former President on the Stand

BOYCE, HAYWOOD WITNESS

Former Head of Western Federation, Now a Rich Miner, Testifies To-day.

By Publishers' Press.

BOISE, Idaho, June 19.—An attempt to prove that William D. Haywood, secretary of the Western Federation of Miners, now on trial for complicity in the murder of former Governor Frank Steunenberg, was responsible for systematic attempts to incite miners to violence, was the feature of the early testimony to-day of Edward Boyce, former president of the Western Federation, but now a wealthy mine owner, was the witness called to prove the contention.

It was the intention of the prosecution to question Boyce regarding many articles published in the Miners' Magazine, the official organ of the federation. The prosecution contends these articles were inflammatory and inciting to violence. It hopes to connect Haywood with the objectionable paragraphs, to prove that his whole policy was one of violence.

Boyce quit the federation in 1902 and Haywood's attorneys professed that nothing he could tell would injure their client's cause.

SETBACK FOR PROSECUTION.

The letters to Orchard's second wife, introduced yesterday to show a conspiracy existed to make it appear Orchard was in Alaska at the time of the Steunenberg murder, on which the State had counted heavily, it is admitted to-day, fell rather flat. There was little to connect Haywood with the papers, or to show that Hayward was connected with the alleged conspiracy. Even Orchard was not positive in his declarations that Haywood knew of the letters sent from Alaska to Mrs. Orchard think her husband was at home.

The blocking of the State's attempt to get in Steve Adams's alleged confession as a part of Orchard's testimony yesterday was also a disappointment to the prosecution.

Rumors of Big Surprises.

Partisans of the prosecution are now spreading rumors of big surprises, intimating that either Mayor or Pettibone will confess and corroborate Orchard. These reports are silly and are spread solely as a bluff to frighten someone.

Two more days will see the end of the State's case, and the remaining testimony is said by Senator Borah to be of the same character that has been introduced in the last week.

Justice Goddard of the Colorado Supreme Court is here to relate the finding of a bomb at his gate, and the State will present Goddard's opinions in labor cases as evidence of malice on the part of the leader of the Western Federation to rid the country of the jurist.

To Deny Orchard's Story.

Scores of disinterested witnesses who will deny certain parts of Orchard's confession are now here waiting to be called by the defence. Miners from Telluride, Cripple Creek, Independence and the Coeur d'Alenes are coming in.

Mrs. Minerva and his pal, Bartel, both from Telluride, and the special projector of Bulkley Wells and Harry Orchard are arrested and fined yesterday for trying to run the town. Meldum was fined $100 and costs and Bartel was fined $50.

The State of Idaho paid these penalties, the money being taken from the special fund appropriated for the prosecution of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone.

Orchard Is Recalled.

Orchard was recalled to the witness stand and occupied the whole of two sessions yesterday. On re-direct examination he explained some of the answers he had given in cross-examination and which disagreed with other evidence given by himself and other witnesses for the State.

Prosecutor Hawley tried to interject Steve Adams's confession, made while he was confined in a penitentiary cell with Orchard, by asking for the witness' version of Adams's admissions and Haywood's connection therewith, but Judge Wood instructed the lawyer that that was not the proper way to get the desired evidence before the court and jury.

The defence laid the foundation for impeaching Orchard, counsel's question indicating that testimony would be sought forward to show that the mesmeric frequently uttered bitter denunciation of Steunenberg, and on one occasion declared his intention to put the latter executive of Idaho out of the way.

Among the witnesses who will be called to prove an alleged motive on Orchard's part are former Lieutenant-Governor Coates of Colorado, former Attorney-General Eagly of Colorado and Max Malkin of Denver.

Prosecution Has Setback in Letters to Orchard's Wife.

Coates and Malkin have been involved in Orchard in some of his contemplated crimes.

Orchard Sought Revenge.

On cross-examination, Attorney Richardson, for the defence, emphasized the point the defence intends to make, that

ACQUITTED OF DEATH CHARGE; GIRL FORGIVEN

VERMONT FATHER OF WORD HIS HOUSE

MARY LAMBERT SENDS IS OPEN TO HER.

Mary Lambert, twenty-four years of age, who to-day was found not guilty of poisoning Henry Sullivan to death by morphine at No. 9 Warrenton street, South End, on April 30 last, is to be given a chance to begin life over again. Her father, a reputable doctor living in Vermont, has written the girl's lawyer, Attorney Scharton, asking him to send his daughter to him.

Miss Lambert after being discharged by Judge Lawton in the Superior Criminal Court to-day was not given her freedom, for after she left the court room, apparently unmoved by the verdict of the jury, she was taken to the detention room, on a charge of theft still hangs over her.

May Quash Theft Charge.

It is thought that the case may not be prosecuted, for the watch which the young woman is alleged to have taken from a man has been returned to him.

The girl, who admitted on the witness stand that she was in the habit of taking ten grains of morphine every night that she might sleep, to-day told her attorney that she would be glad to go back to her father and try to start life over again.

Her father promised to do all that his skill as a physician could accomplish to cure her of her desire for morphine. The girl had been addicted to the drug for three years, he says. While she has been in the Charles street jail the physicians there have been compelled to administer morphine to her.

The case went to the jury late yesterday afternoon, and at 9:35 this morning a sealed verdict was returned. The jury had deliberated but a few hours. It is understood, in reaching this verdict,

Cool and Indifferent.

The police charged that Sullivan was found unconscious in Mary Lambert's room at No. 9 Warrenton street, South End, on April 30. He was rushed to the City Hospital, where he died in a few hours.

In court to-day Mary Lambert was as cool and unmoved as though the case had to do with someone else. She heard the verdict without the evidence of feeling, and when discharged left the court room with apparent indifference.

Admits Using Morphine.

The medical examiner and the two doctors in the hospital who attended Sullivan could not say positively that morphine had caused Sullivan's death. They were inclined to think that it might have been caused by acute alcoholism.

On the witness stand Mary Lambert admitted that she was with Sullivan on April 30. She said that she had taken one five-grain tablet of morphine before she met the man, and that she had gone out to buy whisky. She declared that on returning to the Warrenton street house she saw the police taking Sullivan away to the hospital. After this, she said, she took another morphine tablet. The police found three tablets in her room the following morning.

Mary Lambert denied that she had placed morphine in the whiskey that Sullivan had been drinking while he was with her.

FOUL TIP KILLS PLAYER AT BAT

BINGHAMPTON, June 19.—Albert Sheets is dead as the result of being struck with a foul tip while playing baseball. Sheets was at bat and struck at a ball that glanced from his bat, striking him on the head and fracturing his skull. He lived twenty-four hours.

CITY FATHERS GO ON STRIKE

BOONE, Ia., June 19.—All of the Councilmen of Madrid have resigned, and the town is in a dilemma. The men took the ject that owing to the amount of work involved they could not afford to give up so much of their time for fifty cents a meeting which is allowed.

Commercial Union, Numbering 20,000 Men, Decides to Fight for Fewer Hours and Better Wages—Time and Extent of Strike Not Yet Fixed—Both Big Companies Are Involved.

BY BOSTON AMERICAN LEASED WIRE.

NEW YORK, June 19.—A strike of telegraph operators was to-day decided upon by the executive board of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, to enforce the demands of the union for a general increase of ten per cent. in wages and an eight-hour day.

Should a general strike be ordered, 20,000 operators and 12,000 clerks and messengers employed by both the Postal and the Western Union companies will be called out.

Such a strike would paralyze the business of the country. So serious does the situation appear to the members of the Chicago Board of Trade, where it was felt that the strike would be started, that an appeal has been made to President Roosevelt to intervene.

MATTERS IN SMALL'S HANDS.

The following statement was issued from the headquarters of the telegraphers by Deputy President Koeninkopp:

"The General Executive Board of this union has approved a strike against either or both the Postal and Western Union Telegraph companies, and the matter is now in the hands of President Small. When or where the first strike will be declared will not be given out at this time, but it will take place within the next week or ten days. The plans have been made, and the men are ready for a strike.

"The trouble has been brewing for some time. When the demand of the operators were first made, some concessions were granted. In Boston, for instance, where there are 500 operators, the men were given the increase in wages. No refusal has as yet been made there for the eight-hour workday.

BOSTON APPROVES ACTION.

The Boston union has announced that it stands ready to assist in the strike morally and financially. Assessments will be levied as soon as the strike is started.

In New York the demands were partially conceded to. In some of the large cities, Chicago being the notable example, the men failed to get the increase in wages. Because of the strong dissatisfaction in Chicago it is believed that the struggle will be started there.

President Clowery of the Western Union has refused to recognize the union. Blame for the impending struggle is placed on the officials of both companies in a statement given out to-day by Deputy President Koneukamp.

"END DISCRIMINATION."

He said:

"We regret that this step was made necessary by the attitude of both companies in not only ignoring the memorials presented by President Small, but by their refusing to deal with a committee of their own employees.

"We have never demanded or requested that either company enter into a contract with the union, but we have asked that discrimination on account of membership and affiliation be discontinued; also that employes dismissed from the service on account of their affiliation be restored to their former position and rating.

"Our grievances are just, and our demands only reasonable.

"Had either company shown a willingness to consider the memorials presented or to receive a committee the present situation might have been averted."

500 IN BOSTON TO AID BIG STRIKE

The five hundred commercial telegraphers employed in Boston are ready to do everything in their power to assist the executive board of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America in their strike for the promised ten per cent. and the taking back of seven men and women discharged from the New York offices about a month ago.

"We have received orders to get ready to levy a strike assessment here in Boston, and are awaiting the word as to what to do," said J. J. McGarry, president of Local No. 4 Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, the local union of the telegraphers, to-day.

"The order to strike will probably be issued in a week or ten days."

$100,000 Weekly Fund.

"It would be poor policy off the executive board to intimate where the strike would be called in anticipation of the actual orders to quit work. That would give the employers an opportunity to prepare.

"There are about five hundred telegraphers in the union in Boston. Three hundred of these are employed by the Western Union and about two hundred by the Commercial. A strike levy of ten per cent. on the telegraphers of the country would net a fund of about $100,000 a week. In Boston about $2,500 would be raised weekly by such an order.

"The commercial telegraphers have many grievances which they have been trying for a long time to have settled. One of the chief grievances on the part of many of the men is that the promised ten per cent. increase in wages, which was to have come into effect on March 1 last, has not been complied with and that many of the operators are still working at the same wage that they did prior to that time.

IN FAVOR OF COLE'S MEASURE

Merger Committee Approves Dodging Plan in B. & M. Grab, Is Report.

The latest report from the joint committee on Railroads, at noon to-day, was that there had been a change of front over night and that nine out of the fourteen votes were now for the Cole anti-merger bill, which forbids the New Haven to go ahead gobbling the Boston & Maine, between now and July of next year, for which provides no penalty for a violation of this injunction. It is inferred, as reported Brandeis has pointed out, the Cole bill authorizes, after July of next year, what it prohibits—without penalty—until that time.

Republicans at the State House said that the sudden appearance in town of United States Senator Lodge and Speaker Bates had to do with the new turn in merger affairs. At the State House for months there were indications that Speaker Cole and Attorney-General Malone were plotting together and that Governor Guild might soon be himself lonely.

Probe New Haven's Taxes.

Late yesterday afternoon the Railroad Committee was 7 to 6 against the Cole bill. There was one absentee, Senator Bates of Pittsfield. Lamoureux of North Adams, Dean of Bristol and Shaw of Norfolk, voted with Cole. It was said, however, that one of the committeemen present hadn't voted at all, and that when he got around to voting he would be found in the Cole side, 8 to 6.

The Cole bill, therefore, it was said, might possibly go to the House of Representatives this afternoon. Sentiment in that body, regardless, was still said to be for stopping the merger.

Speaker Cole left the chair early in today's session. Representative Weeks of Everett filled in for him. Where Cole went was more or less of mystery. He didn't go before the Committee on Railroads. He was said to be in conference with the Attorney-General.

The House to-day adopted, without debate an order offered by Mr. Luce of Somerville, calling upon the Tax Commissioner for a report on the tax last assessed on the New Haven, on the Boston & Maine and on their leased companies. The commissioner is also asked to "inform the House what might be the effect on the revenue of the State, or its cities and towns, of an exchange of Boston & Maine stock for New Haven stock."

Anger and Amusement.

The decision of Attorney-General Malone that no real merger is as yet in evidence, and that therefore no law has been broken, was received by legislators to-day with mingled emotions, such as anger, amazement and amusement. Legislators were quick to recall these words from the testimony of President Mellen before the committee:

"What has been done would not have been done but for the corporation. The way it has been done is immaterial. The corporation stands before this committee in all intents and purposes as if it had done it itself.

"We do not dodge one bit. We bought it because we must buy it or lose it, for had we not bought then we could never have bought."

Legislators were to-day comparing this testimony with the law of Massachusetts which says:

"A railroad corporation, unless authorized by the General Court, shall not directly or indirectly subscribe for, take or hold the stock or bonds of any other corporation."

And comparing the Mellen testimony with the Massachusetts law members of the House were to-day finding it difficult many of them said, to quite understand Attorney-General Dana Malone.

Politicians, as a rule, like the Cole bill, which would hold up merger legislation until next year. Postponing and sidetracking, some observers note, seems to be a Cole specialty. They instance how the label measures were thus put dumped to a "recess" committee.

"Adopt the Cole bill," a "pol" said to-day at the State House, "and this Fall's will be the richest campaign that Massachusetts has ever known. On the Republican side, the Drapers will be spending money lavishly—though, of course, legitimately—and the Democratic side the Whitney people will be doing things on a noble scale.

"Meanwhile, the New Haven will be spending a barrel on both sides, showing no partiality, with its eye on the Senate and the House of 1908, which will—under the Cole bill—have the final disposition of the merger matter.

MELLEN'S FOOD DID IT.

Dear Sir:—Your food has done wonders for our baby. Since using Mellen's he has grown from a frail, sickly infant to a glad, bouncing boy. It must be due to the oil ingredient. You ought to see what a picture of health he is, playing with his new rattle

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER.

WHEELER TURNS DOWN CALL TO TECHNOLOGY

President Benjamin Ide Wheeler of the University of California, it became known to-day, has definitely and finally refused the offer to become president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Leased wire dispatches to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day from San Francisco tell of the receiving of a telegram from President Wheeler by the regents of the University of California stating that he will remain at the head of that institution.

Members of the corporation of Technology said to-day that they knew President Wheeler had refused their offer, but were waiting for him to give out the information. President Wheeler is now in New York. He came to Boston from California, and talked over the question with the Technology trustees. After some weeks in the East he will return to California.

The action of President Wheeler leaves Henry S. Pritchett as acting head of the school until the members of the corporation can find someone who wants the place.

President Pritchett lives in New York now. He is president of the Carnegie Institute, and it was to take up this work that he resigned from Technology.

The place as president of Technology pays an annual salary of $15,000 a year. As president of the University of California President Wheeler receives $10,000 a year.

The first man the trustees of Tech selected before they sought President Wheeler was Dr. Andrew Fleming West of Princeton. He refused the call, saying that he preferred to remain at the head of the graduate school at Princeton.

Until to-day it was thought there was a chance that President Wheeler would come to Boston. One of the reasons which is said to have actuated him in refusing the appointment is that his wife does not like Boston weather.

ACTORS PLAY BALL IN THEIR "MAKE-UP"

On Friday afternoon, June 28, the Lillian Lawrence company will play a game of baseball with the "500 Miles from Boston" company at the National League grounds on Columbia avenue. All of the male members of the companies will "make up" for comic characters, and much fun is looked for. The ladies are to sell score books, peanuts, etc., on the grounds. The proceeds are to be given to a worthy charity.

TERRIBLE ITCHING AND SCRATCHING

On Hands, Feet and Face—Caused by Poison Oak and Ivy—Was Unable to Rest Night or Day—Developed into Eczema, which Affected Whole of System—Suffered 4 Years Without Relief.

CURED BY THE CUTICURA REMEDIES

"A healthy person does not heed statements made by sick people, but if such persons suffer from poisonous weeds, a remedy is anxiously desired. I suffered severely for four years from poison oak and ivy. My condition was serious, as I could not rest night or day and be free from a terrible itching sensation from scratching on my hands between the fingers, my feet and face. I got the best of advice and treatment from six different doctors who were anxious to cure me. One of the doctors told me that when the poison was cured, eczema (a worse disease) would follow, which became true. My eyesight was affected, and I went to a hospital especially for the eyes and got relief, but eczema got a terrible hold on my system.

"I was about to give up all hope of ever being cured, yet I could not be reconciled to such results, as my health had been good and free from any disease all my life. My age is seventy-three years. In my extremity I happened to read of Cuticura Remedies for skin diseases, and wrote you to please send me a supply of the Cuticura Remedies. I was anxious about my condition and desired to evade any spurious imitation. This was in July, 1905, and I was instructed to call on a certain druggist for the Cuticura Remedies. I bought five boxes Cuticura Ointment; also some Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Pills as I required them. In four weeks' treatment my face was smooth, and the itching gradually left my hands and feet, and I could rest comfortably, for which I am grateful and happy. W. Field Cowen, Justice of the Peace and Notary Public, Hartly, Del., May 15, 1906."

Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humor of Infants, Children, and Adults consists of Cuticura Soap, 25c.; to Cleanse the Skin, Cuticura Ointment (25c.) to Heal the Skin, and Cuticura Pills (Chocolate Coated, 25c. per vial of 60) to Purify the Blood. Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, Mass. Depots: London, Newbury, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix. 'MERGER MEANS OIL TRUST WILL GRAB WHOLE STATE'

—THOMAS L. HISGEN

Successful Rival of Rockefeller Ring Declares B. & M. Absorption Would Ruin Thousands.

Thomas L. Hisgen, president of the Four Brothers' Oil Company of Springfield and Pittsfield, the sturdiest opponent of the Standard Oil Company in New England, is in Boston, and to-day expressed himself as strongly opposed to the proposed merger of the New Haven and Boston & Maine roads.

"It would mean financial ruin to thousands," declared Mr. Hisgen. "It would put the entire State of Massachusetts under the immediate domination of the Standard Oil monopoly.

"Every shipper in Springfield is opposed to the merger, for they all know just what it will mean. They know that on the New Haven road to-day for a given distance they must pay charges per 100 pounds are from 3 to 5 per cent. higher than on the Boston & Maine. How long would the present rates on the latter road remain when the New Haven people get control? Business would be upset and the loss to everyone, directly or indirectly, inestimable. The business men of my section will fight the merger tooth and nail, for it will be a fight against destruction.

Seek to Rule All Roads.

"It is no guess work, this statement that Standard Oil is back of the merger. William D. Rockefeller and Charles M. Pratt are already in the directorate of the New Haven. Mr. Pratt having exchanged his holdings in the Boston & Maine for stock in the former. Not satisfied with the monopoly of oil, they now want also the absolute control of the railroads, so that they may have all of us completely at their mercy. It seems incredible that this attempt to hold up the people of the State should be successful."

Al Pittsfield, before the Central Labor Union Monday evening, Mr. Hisgen, speaking on a business topic, discussed the situation in unmeasured terms, and his remarks were greeted with great applause.

"Liberty and Monopoly," he said "cannot live together any more than, in the language of the great Lincoln, this country could exist 'half slave and half free.'"

Blow Against Millions.

"I have perfect faith that the people will adjust the wrongs inflicted upon them by these human leeches that are sucking the life blood from our veins by exacting high tribute from everyone who is compelled to use the commodity they control.

"This merger, if it goes through, is going to cost everyone of you workingmen not only your money, but your liberty; it will put the Rockefeller fetters upon every man, woman and child in the State.

Mr. Hisgen's attention was called at this meeting to a letter sent by the local representative, disclaiming any responsibility on the part of the Trust for the "accident" by which thousands of gallons of oil belonging to the Four Brothers' Company had been lost from leaking tanks in Pittsfield recently.

Attempt to Grab Whole State.

"I want to thank you men," said Mr. Hisgen, "for the splendid way in which you stood by us at that time, when the Trust was offering you oil for not only a smaller price than the market price but even for nothing, and you refused to be bunooed.

"Only a shoulder to shoulder fight will keep this monster from devouring us body and soul, and we must be vigilant against its approach, so as not to be taken unaware, and ever ready to fight it to the last, for unless we conquer we are undone. This merger proposition, although seeming so harmless, is one of the most daring attempts on the part of the Oil Trust to grab a whole State at one mouthful.

Iniquitous Methods Exposed.

The Standard Oil Company is concentrating its fight for a monopoly of the oil trade of New England against the Four Brothers' Company, of which Mr. Hisgen is president, and his brothers are his associates. To break up this company the agent of the Oil Trust in the western part of Massachusetts offered certain merchants in Pittsfield free oil, as well as rebates on their contract price, if they would refuse to buy from the independent company.

These merchants turned down the Trust agent, and they went further. They made affidavits telling of the offers of the Oil Trust agent. These sworn statements were published for the first time in the BOSTON AMERICAN. The attention of the Commissioner of Corporations was then drawn to them, and he has started an investigation of the methods of the Oil Trust in this State, looking to criminal prosecution.

FIRST SCHOOL PENSION MAY GO TO WOMAN

Prominent Citizens Present Petition on Behalf of Miss Mary A. Day.

TEACHER OVER 50 YEARS

Efforts are being made to have Miss Mary A. Day, for more than a half century a teacher in Boston public schools, to be the first to receive the benefits of the pension plan which is soon to go into effect.

A petition, the blood of its kind to be presented, signed by many prominent citizens, has just been filed with the School Committee, asking that body to retain her upon the salary list in order that she be able to take advantage of the pension plan.

The petition, which has just been filed, reads as follows:

"Miss Mary A. Day, after fifty years of service in the public schools of Boston, has placed her resignation in the hands of the School Committee, to take effect September 12, 1907.

"We, citizens and taxpayers of East Boston, desire to ask your honorable body if in some way her name cannot be kept upon the teachers' roll so that she may avail herself of the benefit of the pension scheme, which, it is hoped, may become operative in the near future.

"Signed: John L. Bates, Alfred H. Hooper, Frank E. Dimick, Frank C. Wood, Robert F. Jordan, Charles E. Witt, L. W. McKie, O. M. Stalker and ninety-four others."

Petitions to the same effect had already been presented by the Home Club, a woman's organization, and by the teachers of the Emerson School.

FITCHBURG PAYS TRIBUTE TO FATHER FEEHAN

New Bishop of Fall River Weeps at Thought of Leaving Old Parish.

POPULAR IN ALL CREDS

Special to the Boston American.

FITCHBURG, June 19.—Mingled with the congratulations which Rev. Father Daniel F. Feehan, of St. Bernard's parish, this city, is today receiving upon his appointment by the Pope to the bishopric of Fall River, are messages of regret, for Father Feehan is beloved in Fitchburg and he loves the people in return.

"It can't possibly be true. I hope there has been a mistake," he said. "The thought of leaving St. Bernard's is unbearable." And as he said this the tears coursed down his cheeks.

Champion of No License.

For twenty-five years Father Feehan has been one of the most prominent factors in the upholding of this city, temporally as well as spiritually. The news of the elevation of the rector of St. Bernard's parish to the throne so recently vacated by Bishop William Stang through death has caused expressions of regret on all hands.

"For many years I have believed Father Feehan the strongest single force in the city in assisting to supress the no license campaigns and in upholding sane temperance work," said ex-Mayor Frederick Fosdick.

"I rejoice at the selection of Father Feehan for the diocese of Fall River. I believe he will make an exceptional bishop. I feel a deep personal loss, and all of our people will regret his being taken away from us," said Mayor James H. McMahon.

Father Feehan has had the reputation for years of being a priest of rare eloquence, of gifted leadership in the cause of total abstinence, and of great oratorical gifts. His use of the aglish and French languages are almost equally excellent and this fact is thought to have had much to do with his selection for the Fall River bishopric because it has a strong French membership.

Clergy Laud Appointment.

He has been as popular and influential with non-Catholics as with the members of his own faith and his spiritedness has known no denominational bounds.

In Worcester to-day the announcement of the elevation to the bishopric of Father Feehan was received with the greatest interest and approval by the thousands of Catholic clergy and laymen who are there to welcome Cardinal Gibbons, who is to attend the commencement exercises at Holy Cross College.

In Fall River the announcement of the appointment of Father Feehan did not create surprise among the clergy, as they had had expected that for the bishop's choice. The first formal announcement of the appointment will come from Rome in the Papal mancio, Mgr. Falconio, at Washington. The papal delegate will transmit the news to Father Feehan, who will in turn forward it to the administrator of the diocese at New Bedford.

CONCENTRATE WAR FLEET ON THE PACIFIC

—NAVY BOARD

Seventeen Big Battleships to Make Long Voyage Around the Horn.

STILL MORE MAY FOLLOW

WASHINGTON, June 19.—Comprehensive plans for putting the Navy in a state of preparedness for any emergency were to-day sent to Secretary of the Navy Metcalf for immediate dispatch to the President.

By special direction of the President the General Board of the Navy, of which Admiral Dewey is the president, has been in session for several days discussing the need of steps to insure the presence of the war fleet, in fighting condition, at the point where it could render the most effective service in case of an emergency, and the board has now formulated and handed to Secretary Metcalf a series of recommendations, which, among other things, set that the entire battleship squadron of the navy be concentrated on the Pacific coast.

List of Battleships.

Here is the full complement of ships which the Naval Board desires to have sent around the Horn, traveling in a reverse direction over the course of the historic Oregon:

Connecticut, Captain Hugo Osterhaus, 16,000 tons.

Maine, Captain Nathan E. Niles, 12,500 tons.

Missouri, Captain C. E. Pendleton, 12,500 tons.

Louisiana, Captain A. R. Couden, 16,000 tons.

Virginia, Captain Seaton Schroeder, 14,948 tons.

Georgia, Captain R. G. Davenport, 14,948 tons.

New Jersey, Captain W. W. Kimball, 14,948 tons.

Rhode Island, Captain C. G. Bowman, 14,948 tons.

Alabama, Captain S. P. Comly, 11,552 tons.

Illinois, Captain G. Blocklinger, 11,552 tons.

Kearsarge, Captain Herbert Winslow, 11,520 tons.

Kentucky, Captain E. B. Barry, 11,520 tons.

Ohio, Captain L. C. Heilner, 12,500 tons.

Indiana, Captain D. H. Mahan, 10,288 tons.

Iowa, Captain Henry McCrea, 11,346 tons.

Minnesota, Captain John Hubbard, 16,000 tons.

Vermont, Captain William C. Porter, 16,000 tons.

More May Be Added.

To this list of battleships may be added the possibility of sending the Oregon and Wisconsin, which are at the Puget Sound station, but capable of being commissioned by the time the other vessels arrive on the coast, and the Nebraska, under orders to go into commission in about a month.

TROOPS AWE PEASANTS IN UPRISING IN FRANCE

PROTEST LAW PERMITTING ADULTERATION OF WINE—LEADERS ARRESTED.

PARIS, June 19.—Practically a state of siege exists in the Midi district, where the wine-growers are in revolt to force the Government to enact laws to prevent the adulteration of wine. To-day the Government began putting in effect its plan to arrest the ringleaders of the revolt, and the military occupancy of the entire district was determined on to prevent outbreaks or attempts to rescue the men marked for arrest. It is doubtful, however, whether the preparations will be sufficient to quell the enormous population engaging in the revolt.

The first arrest was of Dr. Feroul, Mayor of Narbonne, who resigned in accordance with the plan of the revolutionists. He was seized in his home at 6 o'clock this morning. A strong detachment of troops surrounded the house to keep back the crowd. Feroul was hustled from the house, placed in a motor car and whisked at full speed to Montpelier, where he was given little prison.

Hundreds of the townspeople had remained on guard before the Mayor's house all night to prevent his arrest in case soldiers came. The only thing that prevented a violent demonstration when the soldiers appeared was that Feroul made a speech to the crowd and induced them to remain quiet. No attempt was made to rescue the Mayor.

An attempt was also made to arrest Marcelin Albert, chief of the wine growers at Argelliers, and six of his principal aides. A detachment of soldiers surrounded the houses of the men wanted, but Albert and three of his assistants had concealed themselves. The other three were captured. The police, assisted by the soldiers, made a diligent search for Albert, but could not locate him.

To-day it was discovered that attempts have been made to blow up railroad trains bearing consules of the vineyard owners.

The wildest excitement prevails all over France, and troops have been dispatched to the districts where the greatest agitation prevails.

In view of the incendiary threats of the people, the general staff of the sixteenth army corps had a midnight conference at Montpelier, and plans were laid to meet extraordinary emergencies.

RICH MAN SLAIN OUT OF REVENGE

NEW YORK, June 19.—Julius F. Rosenheimer, the millionaire needle manufacturer was assassinated in the gardens of his villa, "The Roses," at Pelham, for revenge, according to a statement made by the police today. That a secret enemy had planned the awful death which befell him was indicated by many features of the mysterious murder.

Bloodhounds placed on the scent of the assassins traced their escape to the railroad station, where it is believed they boarded a train.

Edward T. Rosenheimer, son of the murdered man, announced today he offer of a reward of $5,000 for the arrest and conviction of the two men who struck his father down in his villa.

DEFENCE SCORES IN HAYWOOD TRIAL

Orchard held bitter resentment against Steunenberg, and blamed him for his poverty, while all his old partners became immensely rich.

Ed Boyce, former president of the Western Federation of Miners, was called by the State and testified before adjournment, as Boyce used to be the most radical labor leader in the West, a lively time was expected.

Boyce is part owner of the Hercules mine, a miner, and still friendly to the Miners' Union and its officials. He was only asked by the State for a history of the organization and its connection with the miners' magazine.

This was to lay the foundation for hundreds of articles printed in the Miners' Journal, and the State will attempt to show that editorial views and communications were anarchistic propaganda.

The question articles are said to be presented till morning, the court giving an early recess, so that the defence might have an opportunity to read them and object if they so desire.

Bob Meldrum, the Telluride deputy, who is acting as body guard for Bulkley Wells, was arrested this forenoon, with his gun mate, R. Bartels, and both were fined $20 and costs in police court on the charge of creating a disturbance and carrying concealed weapons.

Interest revived in the trial to-day and the opening of the morning session saw the spaces reserved for spectators crowded, many women having filed into the trial chamber to see Orchard resume the witness stand.

The usual crowd was augmented also by three score witnesses of the defence from out of town.

All the members of Haywood's family were again in their seats near the prisoner.

Made Copy of Letter.

J. T. Nichols, who was Deputy Sheriff of Canon county and in charge of the jail at Caldwell at the time of Orchard's arrest after the murder of former Governor Steunenberg, took the stand. Orchard had testified that while in jail at Caldwell he received a letter from Pettibone. The original of the letter was destroyed by Orchard, but Nichols made a copy of it before giving it to Orchard.

Nichols identified the copy and a section of the original envelope. The letter was not read. The witness said that it was not signed. Nichols testified that Fred Miller, who is now one of the attorneys for the defence of Haywood, called on Orchard in jail, and that Orchard had not sent a telegram summoning Miller but that he had received a telegram signed "M."

Two letters which Orchard said were in Haywood's handwriting were introduced in evidence. One of them was to Mrs. Orchard at Cripple Creek.

"Would Get Even."

Orchard followed Nichols on the stand. E. F. Richardson's cross-examination was evidently designed to prove that Orchard for years had nursed a grudge against Steunenberg.

Orchard added that he knew Max Malick of Denver, but denied that he had told him he intended to kill Steunenberg. Orchard denied having made similar threats in the hearing of Dr. J. S. McGee of Wallace, Lottie Day of Denver, Kid Walters of Cripple Creek and others.

A conversation with D. C. Coates, formerly lieutenant-governor of Colorado, was repeated by Richardson.

In this Orchard is alleged to have said: "The more I see of my old partners in the Hercules the more bitter I feel. They are rich and I am a wandering pauper. I'll get even with Steunenberg yet."

Max Nordau Scores Wilde's "Salome" as Produced in Paris

LAUDS STRAUSS' MUSIC, BUT SAYS AUTHOR OF BOOK IS COQUETTING WITH INSANITY.

THE expended slashing criticism by Max Nordau, author of "Degeneration," is translated from an article contributed to the Neue Freie Presse on "Salome" as produced in Paris:

By Max Nordau.

German composers of to-day are fortunate in that they follow after Wagner. He prepared the way before them. The famous evening in Paris in 1861 when "Tannhauser" was whistled at, howled down and hopelessly drowned in a storm of mocking laughter was a notable date for all German poets of harmony who valiantly would aspire to conquer Paris, now as ever, the keystone in the arch of musical fame.

Never did the seed of failure produce so rich a harvest of success as in the case of Wagner. Since then in both old and new worlds he has been raised to the position of a demigod; his opponents idiots in the history of art.

Self-Confidence Gone.

On that unhappy occasion the self-confidence of the Parisians forever passed away. The first-night lions have become as tame as house cats. When confronted with a new opus of German authorship they persuade themselves that it pleases, though their taste be unconvinced. It might be another "Tannhauser." To fail in comprehension and enthusiasm at its first appearance were again to be branded as fool for another generation. Better applause, approval! If one be mistaken, one's responsibility is the less.

A Few Impressions.

So "Tannhauser" insured for the "Salome" of Richard Strauss a brilliant reception. Be the work good, bad or indifferent, German, Austria and North America have declared "Salome" to be the greatest musical creation of the generation.

In Paris the head of the State, five Ministers and several Ambassadors were present to receive this sacrament of art. They added nothing to the artistic value of the scene, but they supplied the trimmings of elegance and worth.

It is not my intention critically to analyze "Salome." That has been done by others. I aspire only to give a few impressions.

The opening of Richard Strauss (and he still has some, though scarcely any in German territory) have much against him—lack of high inspiration in the sentiment of the themes; too complicated, and, therefore, incomprehensible development of the motive; use of dissonant tone-groups, anarchic breaking up of the orchestral polyphony.

Of all these defects I find the "Salome" music quite free.

Saint-Saens has written of "Salome": "The orchestra shudders, murmurs, sings, barks, screams, gasps, breaks loose, thunders and grows silent—grows restless again, coughs and sneezes." The master would like to see realized the music he has attuned, but with a prejudiced, antipathetic brain certain impressions are lost. His opinion is but a new proof of the old experience that there is no criterion of a work of art than a contemporary artist.

Comprehended at Once.

"Salome" is perfectly clear and comprehensible at the first hearing to every musically trained ear. The themes flow more plastic than in any former work by Strauss. They are more mobile, nobler and are knit together intelligently, smoothly and flexibly than heretofore. The dramatic declamation completely differentiates throughout the character of the person and the situation. It is hot and passionate for Salome; pathetic for Herod, ecstatic and tragic for Jochanaan, sentimental and melancholy for the captain.

The kiss motif, played in solo by the oboe and repeated again and again after the beheading, burns itself like fire into the memory. The dance music is of Oriental color, but it is not the cheap and vulgar trident of the bazaar with its saucy tinkling music of the danse du ventre. Loud the music is, loud as fire and storm, but it is not noisy.

One thing I admit, however. It is a two-hour frenzy of unrestrained wildness; a storm and earthquake of senseless passion that rages indefatigably the evening long. Till now the irresistible love duet of "Tristan and Isolde" has represented the supreme height of erotic music. "Salome" reaches yet higher points of passion.

Astonishing Harmonies.

Saint-Saens's description of the orchestration is in part true, in part exaggerated. Nevertheless, it is a fact that Richard Strauss can produce startling tone groups, astonishing harmonies. At the moment that the beadsman descends with his axe into the well Jochanaan the orchestra gives forth a series of deep and thrilling notes.

Another masterpiece of musical expression follows immediately upon this clamor of the basses. The executioner is below. We imagine the horror that is being enacted there. The whole orchestra grows suddenly silent, and then, in the uncanny stillness, a single violin raises a short, plaintive whimper like the wail of a dying child. It is repeated. Yet a third time it wails, prolonged, despairing, agonized, till Salome, bending over the well's edge, begins to cry aloud, and the orchestra breaks forth in unrestrained confusion, releasing us from the weird spell.

That interlude, it must be confessed, penetrates marrow and bone; it chills the blood and sets the hair on end; but the medium producing this effect must not be called music.

As to the book, I see no reason why I should grow enthusiastic over Oscar Wilde's work. I made known my diagnosis of the man and his scribbling when he still strutted and screamed peacock fashion in the market place, before his infame against nature had called down upon his head, buffoon and coxcomb in his emptiness, the majesty of English law and justice, and brought him to the punishment which, in my judgment, was far too severe.

A Word for Oscar Wilde.

Toward the self-satisfied, boastful and bombastic fop I had no need to exercise mercy, but against the fallen man, broken and crushed by the wheel of fate, my foot withholds its contempt. So far as the Anglo-Saxon world is concerned, the man is and will remain non-existent. Too wholesome in thought and sentiment are the people of England and America and too busy withal in earnest occupation to waste their time with the phrase-making, word-mashing lauding foppery of a perverted dilettante. With contemptuous kick they spurn him from their path and consider him no more.

Certain perverters of good taste whose malevolent persistence has imposed this nauseating draught upon the German palate have now succeeded in presenting this English carcass as a great poet, and by a certain class of aesthetic fops he has been received as such. Fortunately this class is not large. It is a mere artistic scum. Were it not so, and if "Salome" had to be taken as a criterion of taste, if their estimation of Oscar Wilde had to be taken as a standard of what in their opinion was sober and decent, then I should be fearful of the future of the English and American people during the next century.

"Salome" is the most lamentable of all the works of Oscar Wilde. From beginning to end it is the typical production of an aesthetic pervert—a dilettante coquetting with shamelessness, with folly.

Respected Mother Tongue.

He wrote it in French, and that may be accounted an extenuating circumstance. He had at least some respect for his mother tongue.

The development of certain details, the quarrel of the five Jews, the infatuation of Salome he has taken unhesitatingly from Flaubert—Flaubert, whose "Herodias" is, by the way, the least happy of his romances and whose childish stammerings, dialogue with its constant repetitions, prolixities, repetitious, have been aped by Maeterlinck in his early period, like the Maeterlinck of "Princess Maleine."

"Salome" was first played by La Logue-Poe in February, 1896. People shook their heads, but in the end, after all, the author was behind prison bars. This fact insured him the merciful silence of the Parisian critics.

Oscar Wilde took the story of Herod and the Baptist, which Heine treated with indescribable art, and altered it to the Flaubert model to give himself an opportunity to present in dramatic form the prurient diseased fancies of perverted sensuality in his own life he had himself experienced.

Fears to Express Himself.

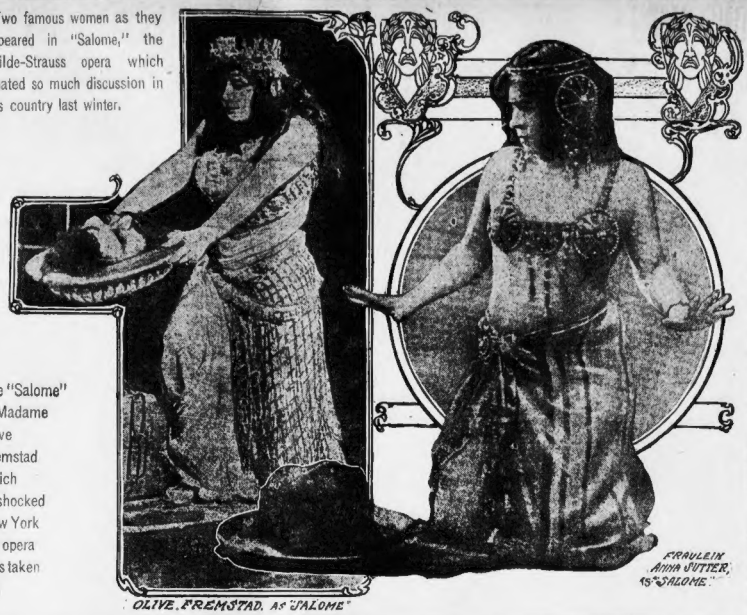
Salome is presented as an erotic lover of necromancy, given to fetish worship—two disordered propensities only to be observed in degenerate men, but never in perfectly sexually exempt women. I must abstain from pursuing this matter further. To express such things in detail is only possible in the lecture room of a clinic and—upon the German stage of to-day.

The naked feet, legs, thighs and arms of the prophet, artificially nourished, white and betraying pride in their appearance, may be to the taste of Oscar Wilde's estimate who share his, happily peculiar, propensities. A wholesome-minded public forbids me to express myself more explicitly.

Whatever be the fate of "Salome" in the future, the piece is certain to find a place in the history of morals and customs. "Salome" and its success or failure will be the basis upon which will be judged the spiritual and moral condition of civilized peoples at the beginning of the Twentieth Century. It will estimate the taste of the Renaissance by the "Soiree Parisienne" of Arcitua.

We know, of course, that it was only the cocottes and the nobility who abandoned themselves with such spasms. It will be the business of future historians to discover what class of people in our time was edified or intoxicated by the play "Salome."

Two famous women as they appeared in "Salome," the Wilde-Strauss opera which created so much discussion in this country last winter.



The "Salome" of Madame Olive Fremstad which so shocked New York the opera was taken off.

ROOSEVELT FOR A THIRD TERM, SAYS FRIEND

OMAHA, Neb., June 19.—"I think I am in a position to say that President Roosevelt has decided that he cannot decline the nomination if it is tendered him unanimously.

"Secretary Taft has not, and probably will not, announce himself as a candidate."

Former Circuit Judge Selden Palmer Spencer, of St. Louis, speaking from an intimate knowledge of national politics and just arrived from a political mission to Washington, made the foregoing statements in an interview here last night. Judge Spencer came here to join Secretary Taft, with whom he left on a train for Kansas City. When he brought some message direct from the White House to Secretary Taft cannot be learned, though he did admit he came to see the Ohioan concerning politics.

Judge Spencer was the Republican candidate for United States Senator from Missouri in 1905. He was on the circuit bench for six years. He was in the class of '84 at Yale, of which Taft is a graduate.

"At this time I am not authorized to give out information officially," said Judge Spencer, "but I can say that the President has recently considered very carefully the question of accepting the Republican nomination for another term if he decides in his own mind that it is the true wish of the people that he do so.

"Secretary Taft has not and probably will not announce himself a candidate. Of course, if President Roosevelt does not step in, the Secretary of War will receive the unanimous support of the next Republican convention.

"However, I think I am in a position to say that President Roosevelt has decided that he cannot decline the nomination if it is tendered him unanimously. He realizes that his declination would be weakened should he at this time announce himself as ready to accept the nomination. While in Washington I was in conference with persons authorized to speak for the President; in this matter and there is no doubt in my mind as to what may be expected. I do not believe Secretary Taft's name will be presented to the convention."

YOUTH TERRIBLY BEATEN, UNCLE SENTENCED TO JAIL

Made to Pick Up Coal and Wood for Family—Body Covered With Bruises.

Charged with beating his twelve-year-old nephew, James J. Gallagher was sentenced to one month in the House of Correction on Deer Island by Judge Fallon in the South Boston District Court to-day. Agent Mann of the Children's Society brought twelve-year-old Jeremiah E. O'Brien into court and told Judge Fallon what he had discovered about the boy's home life.

The boy lived with the Gallagher family at No. 387 Second street. For two years Agent Mann said the little fellow had been compelled to go out and find all the coal and wood used by the family of his uncle.

Afraid to Go Home.

Ten days ago he failed to find either wood or coal. Fearful of the consequences "Jerry" remained out all that night, sleeping in doorways. The next day he went home. His punishment, Agent Mann said, was extremely severe.

Head Master Bassett of the Bigelow School where the boy is a pupil, called the matter to Truant Officer Quick to his attention.

Quirk called upon the society and Agent Mann found the boy.

"Jerry" was covered with bruises, Agent Mann told the Judge. One eye was closed and discolored. His face and body bore marks of ill treatment. Agent Mann took the lad in charge and secured a warrant for Gallagher.

When the uncle was asked in court today what he had to say he denied that he had treated the boy in the manner charged by Agent Mann.

"I didn't intend to hurt him," he said.

Appeals His Case.

Judge Fallon found out that Gallagher had a wife and three children depending upon his wages as a painter. He felt compelled, however, to impose a sentence. Gallagher cried when the sentence was read and appealed. He was held in $300 bail.

"Jerry" O'Brien and his twelve-year-old sister are orphans. Up to a short time ago Mary lived with the Gallaghers, but Agent Mann secured her a home with a Dorchester family.

The boy was to-day sent to the Harrison avenue Home for Destitute Children.

BROTHERS WED TWO SISTERS

SPRINGFIELD, June 19.—A double wedding, in which two brothers married two sisters, was solemnized at the Church of the Immaculate Conception in West Springfield to-day by Rev. John J. Melley.

The brides were Miss Margaret L. Toohey and Miss Nellie F. Toohey, daughters of Mrs. Martin Toohey of No. 28 Globe street, West Springfield. The former married John J. Cassidy and the latter Patrick H. Cassidy, who are cigar manufacturers in this city. A wedding breakfast was served in the home of the young women.

2 KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 19.—John Trevor and Alfred Trevor, proprietors of the H. & S. Pogue department store, are dead to-day as the result of an automobile accident last night. The two merchants hired a machine to take them home, and when going out Reading road they noticed their own chauffeur in their automobile passing them. The Trevors tried to catch the passing machine. In trying to avoid running over a man the tonneau struck a iron post, throwing the brothers out of the machine.

MAYOR FAVORS BANK'S REQUEST

While the majority of Boston's streets are obliged to wait for repairs on the ground that the City Council is holding back the work by refusing to pass the Mayor's loan order for street improvements the National Shawmut Bank, by simply notifying the Mayor that it wanted the work done, is enabled to have an entirely new street of wood block pavement constructed in front of its new building on Water street.

Superintendent of Streets Doyle pleased President Gaston of the Shawmut to-day by giving a contract aggregating about $3,500 to the United States Wood Preserving Company of New York for paving Water street with wood blocks between Devonshire and Congress streets, just the length of the new bank building.

GOVERNMENT WILL PROBE THREAD TRUST

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The thread trust is to be investigated by the department of justice. Formal complaint has been made, alleging that the American Thread Company is a monopoly in restraint of trade, and asking that it be dissolved through prosecution by the federal government.

Those who are to receive degrees of bachelor of arts are: David Lawrence Williams, William Joseph Wheatley, Joseph Kenna Burns, William Joseph Carr, Valentine Albert Cushing, James Nicholas Dorr, David Vincent Fitzgerald, Nicholas Joseph Flatley, John Patrick Grady, Edward James Hurley, Francis Ellis Kelly, David Michael Lyons, Daniel Joseph Maguire Guinness, John Joseph Murray, Joseph Dennis Sullivan and James Edward Supple.

Daniel Michael Lyons, David Vincent Fitzgerald and William Joseph Wheatley will speak on "The True Ethical Principles in Economic Questions." James Peter Warren of the class of 1906 will receive the degree of master in the school of arts.

Many invitations have been extended to prominent graduates and city and State officials to attend the exercises.

FORM LEAGUE TO WAGE WAR ON WHITE PLAGUE

Chelsea to-night forms an organization for the prevention of tuberculosis. It is the outcome of the suggestion made by the Chelsea Medical Club. A committee which was appointed to look into the matter of association will make their report at the meeting to be held in Y. M. C. A. Hall. At that time a constitution will be adopted and officers elected.

Some time ago Mayor Willard and a number of clergymen and laymen met interested themselves in the plan adopted in other cities of having a number of homes, suggest proper food and open air sleeping apartments. The scheme proceeded so favorably and under limited conditions seemed to be doing so much good that it was decided to go ahead with the work.

If the co-operation of citizens that is hoped for in the movement develops at to-night's meeting, the city will have under supervision all of the tuberculous victims in Chelsea.

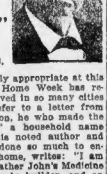
OLD HOME WEEK.

A Letter From the Author of the "Old Homestead"



DENMAN THOMPSON.

It is particularly appropriate at this time, when Old Home Week has recently been observed in so many cities and towns, to refer to a letter from Denman Thompson, he who made the "Old Homestead" a household name in America. This noted author and artist, who has done so much to encourage love of home, writes: "I am glad to indorse Father John's Medicine as a tonic and body builder, and an excellent remedy for colds and lung troubles."

Thousands Visit Summer Resorts This Week as Guest of Sunday American.

5 RESORTS TAKE COUPONS

With whales and porpoises sporting in the bay and hundreds of swimmers frolicking about the rafts, amid the sea breezes, Revere Beach is handling great crowds.

The managers of twelve leading amusements on the Boulevard and Avenue are taking in money and SUNDAY AMERICAN coupons with every turn of the ticket seller. While using SUNDAY AMERICAN coupons this week, remember that next Sunday there will be published more coupons, good on several days and evenings of next week.

The places for which they may be used, by paying half price with coupon, are: Musical Railway, Roller Coaster, Mystic Mill, Automobile Show, Rough Rider, Hippodrome, Crescent Gardens Theatre, Theatre Comique, Harley's Hurdles, Palace Merry-Go-Round, Animal Show and Scenic Temple. At the latter place the coupons will be good this week on seats on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon and evening and Thursday and Friday afternoon. One place where the tickets are good for full admission is at Paragon Pavilion, the biggest and best skating surface running this Summer.

LION TAMER BENSON WELCOMES AMERICAN COUPON HOLDERS

Lexington Park is full of fun for AMERICAN coupon holders this Summer. Beginning Sunday, a ticket of admission will be published for two days next week at this inland pleasure retreat, where teddy bears shatter glass frames in willing hands, where the big, clumsy brutes restlessly paw at iron fences, where the elks, the buffaloes and the gazelles, monkeys, birds and South American animals report in strong enclosures in full view of picnic parties, and where the seals are trained and round in the carousels and the roller coasters.

Manager Benson, the lion tamer, will see that you have a good time.

19,000 ENJOYED SIGHTS AT WHITE CITY ON SUNDAY

Manager White of White City, on Lake Quinsigamond, said to-day that there were 19,000 admitted to this great resort Sunday.

On Monday and Tuesday and to-day the SUNDAY AMERICAN coupon crowds were entered free to the park, enjoying the band concert and free seats at the theatre, a free ride in the famous Old Mill and on the Scenic Railway.

Manager White said: "Our $30,000 theatre is open now. We have the strongest bill ever seen at a Summer show hereabouts. I propose the following coupons for next week, to be published in the next BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN:

"First, one admitting to the park, which includes the band concerts and out-door amusements and admission to the theatre. The next coupon will be for reserved seats in the theatre. The third will be for White City's Wonderland. Coupon holders will like Wonderland. It is different from most shows we have here in these parts. I'm not going to describe it, let them see for themselves."

White City's coupons are accepted day or evening on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday, and each one is a saving of straight 50 cents.

THOUSANDS SEE KNABENSHUE FLY AT VANITY FAIR

Down in Rhode Island they are turning out by the thousands to see Knabenshue's airship at Vanity Fair. There are over a hundred other fine features at this beautiful East Providence resort, as well.

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN is giving coupons each Sunday entitling holders to Vanity Fair Park and to study the airship and be thrilled by the aeronautic circus. Next Sunday's coupons will be good for the first three following days. Knabenshue will be there all this week and next.

SAVE 25 CENTS WITH COUPONS AT CANOBIE LAKE PARK

SUNDAY AMERICAN coupons for Canobie Lake Park for next week will be five in number. The admission to the park is free. The coupon may be used Sunday night. The coupons will call for a ten-cent seat in the theatre, where E. S. Sherman, the Moving Picture King, will produce the "Passion Play."

The other four coupons are for Monday and Friday. They give the holders a handside on the lake, admission to the Laughing Gallery, the House of Mirth and the Carousal, a saving of twenty-five cents.

Canobie Lake Park is a wonderful treat, with amusement houses, boulevards, shaded lanes, groves, and its lake, full of fish.

ACTRESS PLAYS 3,000 TIMES

Lillian Lawrence had an unusual tribute paid to her talent on the 3,000th performance before a Boston audience. The play was "On Parole," a military drama.

At the close of the third act Miss Lawrence was almost exhausted by responding to the unusual number of curtain calls and the floral tributes handed over the footlights. Curator Allen, the leading man, presented Miss Lawrence with a silver loving cup from the company. The souvenir provided the patrons was a silk programme, on the front of which was a medallion portrait in colors of Miss Lawrence.

ENGINE KILLS MAN IN STREET

While attempting to cross Atlantic avenue early to-day, William Beagbile, 38 years old, a fisherman, was run down and fatally injured by a locomotive of the Union Freight Railway, the line having the right of way on the avenue. Beagbile was terribly mangled. He was hurried to the Relief Hospital, but died a short time after reaching there.

LONE YANKEE CONSUL WINS BOSTON BRIDE

Amy W. Alden to Share Diplomatic Honors With W. L. Lowrie at Weimar, Germany.

WOOED WHILE HIS GUEST

Falling in love with William L. Lowrie, the handsome bachelor who, though residing alone over the United States consulate at Weimar, Germany, has been noted for his official hospitality to American belles, Miss Amy W. Alden of this city is soon to share his diplomatic honors as his bride.

Miss Alden, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Cecil Alden of No. 140 Boylston street, has just announced her engagement to her intimate friends.

Love at First Sight.

It was during her last visit to Weimar, the Mecca of so many Americans, last year, that Miss Alden met the consul. It is said to have been a case of love at first sight. Miss Alden's stay in the romantic German city was prolonged at the earnest solicitation of Mr. Lowrie, and before she left she had promised him her hand.

Miss Alden will sail for England late in August and will be met in London by Mr. Lowrie, who will get leave of absence. The marriage will be held in that city early in September and there will be a honeymoon trip among historic parts of the Continent before Mr. and Mrs. Consul Lowrie settle down in Weimar.

Miss Alden a Linguist.

Miss Alden is a graduate of Channing Hall and of Dean Academy. She is a linguist, speaking French, Italian and German fluently. She is a globe trotter and thinks nothing of an extended tour of foreign countries unattended save for her self. Miss Alden is also a finished musician and has written many clever essays —the epitome of her keen observation of the world.

She is as well known in the Pacific Coast society and in the capitals of Europe as in Boston, where she counts scores of influential friends. She had just returned from San Carlos and is now busily selecting her trousseau, which will be all of American make, for although a cosmopolitan, Miss Alden is strongly patriotic.

Mr. Lowrie's home is at Elgin, Ill.

JAPAN SEEKS NO WAR WITH UNITED STATES

—LIANG CHENG.

Declaring that he thought there was little prospect of a war between the United States and Japan, retiring minister Sir Chentung Liang-Cheng added: "America is too powerful, and, besides, Japan does not want to fight, in my opinion."

Over one hundred business men sat at the banquet table at the Algonquin club last night, where the distinguished Oriental statesman was the guest of honor.

To-day Sir Chentung Liang-Cheng goes to Andover to visit the school at which he was a pupil. He returns to Boston to morrow for the last time.

At last night's banquet Sir Chentung in beautifully smooth English, spoke on China's position in regard to the world, and especially the United States.

"A feeling of unrest is manifest throughout all China, and when a nation that has always been so well satisfied to keep its own counsel shows signs of forsaking up the pulse of the outside world one naturally rightly feel that some profound change in China's policy is imminent," said the minister.

"There is nothing mysterious about this restlessness. It is the same process that Italy and Germany have been through, namely: an awakening. China has been divided in the past into a provincial government, the experience becoming more and more independent and only bound by race and religion. To-day a tremendous national feeling is dominant for a government more centralized.

"China wants to be strong in a united manner, domestically, and desires above all things that her rights as a nation be respected.

China Copies United States.

"China about a year ago sent representatives to the United States and Europe to observe their methods of government, and as a result a constitution has been formulated, between different provinces very similar to your Governor's Council and Congress.

"She wants to grow broader and better in all things, and is constantly striving to fulfill various political and social standards. I shall do all in my power to promote this work, and as a Methodist, was educated at Andover. I want to say that all that I am or hope to be I owe to Massachusetts.

"Wherever I am, I hope that I can always claim the friendship of the United States, and especially Massachusetts."

Mayor Fitzgerald's secretary, in behalf of the Mayor, welcomed Sir Chentung to the city.

Chinese students were highly indorsed by President Eliot, who told of their work in Harvard and the phenomenal progress made by most of them.

President George D. Harris of Amherst College told how the Amherst class of 1879, in which Sir Chentung would have graduated, had adopted him as their own. William Jennings Bryan spoke on the coalness between the two countries.

Samuel H. Cruen, president of the American Board of Foreign Missions, gave an account of the progress of his work in China.

Minister Visits Historic Spots.

Accompanied by his wife, Minister Liang-Sir Chentung Liang Cheng, arrived in town yesterday morning and proceeded to the home of Dr. C. D. Tenney in Brookline. He was later shown the historic spots at Concord and Lexington.

At noon the party returned to Mr. Dickinson's home for luncheon. General William F. Draper, ex-ambassador to Mexico, Chester A. Heath, Boston assistant secretary of the treasury, being present. After a pleasant social hour the party was driven to Cambridge, where the Chinese minister was escorted as outdoor reception at the home of Dr. C. D. Tenney.

FALL RIVER CARNIVAL QUEEN CROWNED TO-DAY

Thousands of Merrymakers Throng the Streets as Four-Day Festival Opens.

FALL RIVER, June 19.—The Fall River carnival opened to-day. The streets are decorated and thousands of merrymakers have turned out to make the four-day festival a great success.

The big event of this the opening day is the crowning of the queen of the carnival. Miss Elizabeth Whittingslow, a pretty mill girl, is the queen. To-night she will vie with the elaborate electric illuminations that have been arranged.

The crowning event of the whole carnival will be the big parade tomorrow night. Captain George R. H. Buffington of the Massachusetts Naval Brigade, will be the grand marshal.

The first division will be composed of the Twelfth Company, Corps of Coast Artillery, and Companies F and I, Naval Brigade of New Bedford, and possibly the company of Coast Artillery from New Bedford. Then will come the Second Regiment, Hibernian Rifles, with a militia company from Newport, the First Regiment of Franco-American Brigade of New England, including companies from Taunton, New Bedford and Warren, R. I.; the post-office employees, headed by the Boston Letter Carriers' Band; Cliu Mc-Alpine, with a band of forty bagpipers; the Knights of Columbus, including a council from Newport; the Elks, Eagles, Portuguese societies, the fire department, water department, police department, Catholic Order of Foresters, and a number of other social and fraternal organizations. Most of the fraternal organizations and social organizations will have illuminated floats in line.

Prizes have been offered for the best floats and Mayors F. J. McCarthy of Providence, J. H. Tracy of Taunton, Charles S. Ashley of New Bedford, William C. Clark of Newport and John T. Coughlin of this city will act as judges.

20,000 PEOPLE SEE COWBOYS BUST BRONCHOS

Buffalo Bill is certainly justified in saying that his big performance, the Wild West and Congress of Rough Riders of the World, yesterday witnessed by about 20,000 people, is educational.

As Johnny Baker, the world famous marksman, was shooting down pigeons three and four at a time yesterday a man who apparently had not finished his June 17 celebration made his way to the centre of the field, and with much shouting waved his hat in the air and cried out: "Shoot it, Johnny did, pierced several holes in it, amid great roars of laughter.

Each afternoon the performance will begin at 2 o'clock and in the evening at 8 o'clock.

HUGHES SIGNS RECOUNT BILL FOR MAYORALTY

Says Failure to Remove Doubt of Accuracy of Election Is Grave Public Scandal.

DENOUNCES McCLELLAN

ALBANY, June 19.—The mayoralty recount bill is now a law. Governor Charles E. Hughes has signed it.

The Governor, in a memorandum filed with the neighing bill, explains the delay which McClellan has caused since November, 1905. The Governor waited until the last minute to hear from McClellan's supporters as to the veto the supplemental bill, which, upon the "Mayor's own representations, was passed so that ballot boxes in every district might be opened, if necessary, to ascertain a fruitful result, the issue in any case to be made a charge upon the city.

Proceedings Not to be Delayed.

The supplemental bill was sent to McClellan last Friday week. His representative here says he purposes holding it until the Legislature reconvenes, so that it cannot be acted on in case of a veto and will thereby die.

But whatever disposition the "Mayor" may make of the pending bill, it is the announced intention of those who demand a recount satisfaction of the controversy by the final settlement of the election and before Fall, if possible, dissolve all doubt as to the possession by sole right to a seat in the City Hall.

The Governor in his memorandum says:

"It is the object of this bill, as summarily as possible, to dispose of the controversy which should have been settled long ago.

"In the mayoralty election in New York city, in 1905, among 647,000 votes were cast, of which, according to the official canvass George B. McClellan received 228,307, and William Randolph Hearst, 224,923. The accuracy of the canvass was challenged.

Is Grave Public Scandal

It is well known to all who are conversant with sentiment in the city of New York that there is a widespread doubt as to the accuracy of the official canvass. The failure to remove that doubt and to determine in a prompt and decisive manner, satisfactory to all fair-minded persons, the result of the election, has become a grave public scandal.

The denial of all relief, either under the existing law or through appropriate legislation for the ascertainment of the fact whether the votes had been lawfully counted as cast, has brought our law into contempt and created a grievance shared by many thousands of our fellow-citizens who believe that a great wrong has been committed which it is the duty of those charged with the enactment of laws to repair.

"We need not concern ourselves with the origin of this doubt or the cause of its prevalence. It is enough that it exists. In the public interest and for the sake of the credit of our institutions this matter must be settled.

Recount in Every District

The present bill provides that if the result is to seat Mr. Hearst the city shall bear the cost. Mr. Hearst's attorney has formally stated on behalf of his client that in the event of the signing of this bill Mr. Hearst would pay the cost of recount in every election district in the city.

In the belief that public policy requires the settlement of this controversy as speedily as its nature will permit, and that the public would be satisfied with legislation to this end should fail, I approve this bill.

The recount bill signed by Gov. Hughes yesterday provides a very simple procedure for recounting the entire municipality vote.

You filing a petition of a candidate and a bond to pay the costs of the proceedings if the recount does not change the result. It is made the duty of the Supreme Court justice to make a recount of the vote in every election district specified in the petition upon the return thereto to each candidate affected. The canvass must proceed in the county court, room 351, except upon affection in the presence of the court and commissioner appointed by the court.

Court Appoints Commissioners

The court may appoint as many commissioners as it deems necessary to get a speedy result, but no district is recanvassed by more than one commissioner. The duties of the commissioner are merely to count the ballots and set down the result in the presence of attorneys for each side. The commissioner does not pass upon the validity of any ballots.

If there is a dispute about a ballot it is laid at one side until the count for the election district is finished, when compared, then all disputed ballots are passed right and left before the boards, then thrown in and there, and at the conclusion of the canvass rules out such ballots as are void. This order supersedes the old returns.

450 RUSSIAN SOLDIERS MUTINY AGAINST CZAR

Commander of Company Assassinated and Rebels Repelled by Fire of Loyal Troops.

KIEF, June 19.—A mutiny, in which 450 soldiers of the Twenty-first Battalion of Sappers participated, occurred here to-day. The commander of one of the companies was assassinated and the soldiers began firing at random, spreading terror in the district.

Five loyal battalions were summoned to quell the mutiny, and called upon the mutineers to surrender. They replied with shots, however, wounding four of the loyal soldiers.

The loyal battalions fired a volley, and the mutineers broke and fled. Two hundred and fifty-eight of them were arrested, but the others escaped.

Later reports indicate that the mutiny was serious, although no details as to whether any of the murderers were killed have been received. Only official telegrams have been allowed to pass the censor.

HARPAN, Manchuria, June 19.—A sharp skirmish occurred yesterday between the band of Chinese bandits who murdered Captain Dennoff and a detachment of Cossacks in eastern Manchuria, forty-five miles from the frontier. Three Cossacks were killed and two wounded. The bandits are retreating north.

RUSSIANS IN HUB WILL AID REVOLT AGAINST THE CZAR

Russian revolutionists in Boston are aroused by the latest news from their fatherland. Many of them are already preparing to go back, for the officials of the various organizations say, there will be need of every man and woman able to offer resistance and willing to do the work of propaganda.

The names of those who are to go back to the land of the Czar are kept secret 'lest for the reason that owing to the presence of Russian spies in this city it is dangerous to let it be known in advance that they are going back to the land of the knout and the seafold.

While there is no doubt that many are to return to the dominion of the Czar, the action of the convention of Russian Social Democrats, now being held in New York, is awaited before any definite steps are to be taken.

The dissolution of the Duma was something that all of us expected," said Max Dala, secretary of the Russian Social Revolutionary Group of Boston, to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "The chief question with us now is as to whether the Russian people are prepared for an uprising. Had it been known beforehand that the Czar to intent upon re-establishing autocracy, the congress of the Social Democrats, recently held in London, would have taken steps for the overpower response to this new outrage, but in the hope that the government will finally yield to the people's demands it was decided to continue peaceful work.

"Should a call for men and money to buy arms be received, I believe will respond with both liberally. Within a few days we shall have received a detachment of Cossacks in eastern Manchuria, forty-five miles from the frontier. Three Cossacks were killed and two wounded. The bandits are retreating north.

Not only men but women, some of them hardly out of their teens, are ready to embark on the journey at the end of which overtures and starvation may await them, or perhaps prison and Siberia.

"I am glad of us can be heroines," said one of the young women, "but those who have not the courage to die fighting for liberty can at least work for it in the movement, and we shall not rest until freedom in Russia is an accomplished fact. I am not going back, as my aged father and mother are dead and my little sisters and brother need me here, but every cent that I can get means a step nearer freedom, every dollar that we get together means a weapon, and we are willing to give all we possess that the reign of terror called Czarism may end."

Envy and Jealousy the Ugliest Traits in Human Character

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

WHEN talk of women as devoured by jealousy of one for another. That is ancient history among the women of intellect, the progressive, active, up-to-date woman who have something to do both in social and domestic as well as intellectual realms; the jealous, envious woman is the exception.

Where women live only to dress and show their jewels and equipages and outshine one another jealousy is still rampant; but that class of women is so small and so insignificant, when we consider the race as a whole, that it is scarcely worth taking into consideration.

When we meet a woman of intelligence and culture who is not a mere society doll and find her exhibiting the ugly and unbecoming vice of jealousy we are shocked and pained, so unusual is the case in this era. Yet we do meet her now and then.

An Unbecoming Trait

IT is a curious thing that a woman who seeks to be always scrupulously attired and is particular about the hue of her gowns, veils and hats, will allow an unbecoming trait as jealousy to exist in her mind.

Nothing draws the face, contracts the eyes, takes away the curves of the mouth and mars the bloom of the complexion so soon as jealousy.

And what a silly and senseless thing it is, easily considered.

If another woman is beautiful, or if she gives the impression of beauty, if she is popular, or bright, or possesses special taste in dress, or is terribly entertaining, what you and I are in no way harmed by all this. She is, on the contrary, an incentive to us to bring out all our own possibilities for charm and to cultivate them.

We will do well to study her and to emulate her good points.

If it is a matter of mere physical beauty we might as well be unhappy because a tree or a flower is more beautiful than we or sit down and sulk because we do not glow like the diamond when we see one sparkle.

All beauty, all brilliancy, all success makes the great fountain of these qualities seem the more inexhaustible. They come from it and flow back to it. And it is easy for us to choose to drink from it.

We Deceive Ourselves

PERHAPS we tell ourselves that we are disgusted seeing the world admire mere physical beauty or hearing it praise mediocrity, while we, our own good and genius are recognized.

That is pure self-deception. We are merely JEALOUS. Better call it by the right name and dig it out by the roots.

Only shallow pated and silly people continue to follow after brainless beauty or worthless talent. And they often give up the pursuit.

Why should we begrudge any one such a following?

Beauty attracts, but never holds the worth-while observer unless it is backed up by other qualities.

We have all seen the dazzling beauty without brain or heart put into the shade, while the girl with love, wit and charm kept her ranks of admirers increasing.

We have all seen the face we thought beautiful at first lose its beauty as we became familiar with its utter lack of sympathy, and we have seen the face with not beauty of feature grow into radiant charm by acquaintance.

Therefore, when we are conscious of the first impulse of jealousy we may set set the counteracting vibrations at work! Why not talk it all out with ourselves and say, "All the beauty in the universe is mine if I keep my thoughts beautiful. I am now what I made myself in a former life. I can change my features and my form into a beauty which shall attract all eyes if I keep every beautiful quality alive in my soul. The first step to be taken is generous toward others; to praise freely and fearlessly acknowledge the charms of other women.

For the ugliest things in the human mind are envy and jealousy."

The same line of treatment should be followed when we find ourselves unwilling to see others succeed in our mental realm.

Be Generous to Rivals

THE musician, the writer, the artist, the business man, all will be greater in their respective realms if they will generously applaud their rivals. No man or woman ever got hurt by giving praise of another.

For in truth there is no such thing as rivalry.

Each soul is a part of the whole; yet each part has its own particular place, power and purpose.

The only thing for each one to do is to make himself so perfect that he fits into the whole without jar or mar and helps to beautify the great human fabric.

Then each one will be truly master of his self in other lives.

You started as a divine atom and you have taken on layers of materiality. Just as you make the divine atom shine through the material layers will you grow beautiful, great, gifted and wonderful.

That is the work for you to keep in mind, and each time you cling to envy or detract from the beauty, talents or success of another you are hindering your own best interests and go back instead of forward in the work of self-development.

It is for self-help that we are here on earth, and you will needs come again and again until it is accomplished.

Keep busy. NOW.

And take care that what you believe is in yourself a merely highly refined sense of self-protection in your own vanity, petty jealousy, visible to all eyes save your own.

STRANGE ANIMALS I HAVE MET

By Dorothy Dix

NO PIKER'S GAME FOR THEM—OH, NO!

"I SEE," said the Old Traveller, "that our noble President is taking a full out of the nature students and saying that the marked peculiarities that they observe in wolves and bears and wild cats, he never saw, is that he has seen variations with ways the like of which they never saw in all their born days.

"This is unanswerable proof to either side. These mighty hunters who pursue big game with a fountain pen and a kodak simply see nothing, but, without a word to bring upon myself, I think I may say, without fear of contradiction, that I came very near to once capturing the strangest and rarest animal in the world.

"It was the little creature known as the Obedient Child, that is practically extinct now, only a scattering specimen of the species being seen at rare times and at long intervals.

"I had heard much of the charm and beauty of this little animal, which is said to make the most delightful pet in the world, and for years and years in all my journeying I had been on the lookout for it, intending to get one enough to bring it back alive, to present it to the Museum of Natural History in my native town.

An Old Tradition

"NEVER, however, got on the slightest trail of one. I found many places in which a tradition existed that such a creature not only had lived but that it was fairly common, but nobody had even seen one. Even the oldest inhabitants, the ones who personally known of one in their part of the country, and who made out of it as a vanished type of a thing that was half mythical, but the duty of the present.

"Fancy, then, my amusement and delight when one day in travelling through No Man's Land I came suddenly upon a woman playing with one of these fabulous little creatures. I stopped entranced, for without doubt it was the most beautiful and attractive little animal that I had ever seen in my life. Its head was covered with short, soft, silky, brown hair, and its eyes, which were also brown, were extremely intelligent and had the gentlest and most amiable look. Its every seen, and all of its movements had the swiftness and grace of a kitten.

"Its size and form it greatly resembled a boy of about ten years of age, and indeed at first I mistook it for just an unusually child; but I soon saw my mistake, for I noticed that when the lady spoke to the little creatures and told it to do a certain thing it went immediately and did it, and when she told it not to do a thing it refrained from doing it.

A Strange Spectacle

"THE spectacle was so strange and I was so amazed that I had to rub my eyes more than once to assure myself that I was not dreaming, for in all my experience I had never seen anything like it.

"Safely concealed from view, I watched the gambolling of the little animal that seemed as merry and as mischievous as a monkey, but always the same strange thing was happened. At a word from the lady he would come and would did as he was bidden.

"At first she had a box of sweets and when she was feeding it to him I noticed that when it had eaten enough it refused to eat more, although the chocolates looked delicious and it licked them with evident relish.

"Then, when the lady called to him, "Carl" for that I ascertained was the creature's name—"Carl, quit making that noise," it immediately desisted. So, too, when she wearied and desired to return to her home, although Carl was hugely enjoying himself playing in the opening, he followed her back to the house with perfect readiness and without begging to be allowed to stay a little longer.

"Convinced that I had at last found a real live specimen of the Obedient Child, I tracked it and the lady to the house in which they lived, and for several days kept close watch of it.

"Everything that I saw confirmed me in my original belief that I had discovered the rarest animal in the world. You may be sure that I made the closest vigilance in my observations, and you can scarcely believe the strange and incredible thing that I saw.

Actually Obeyed

"CARL," the lady would cry a half-dozen times a day, "take this letter and run to the mail box on the corner and post it," or "Go to the corner grocery and fetch me a pound of butter in a hurry, and do not stop and play on the way." And to my credit it when I tell you that this strange creature actually obeyed its mistress. It refused to stop and listen to a hurdy-gurdy, or see a neighboring boy's animal frolic, although there was a crowd gathered about it and all the children called to come and look?

"Once the little creature had set its heart upon going to a circus and at another time upon going to a Punch and Judy show, a fragment of amusement of which this particular animal is peculiarly fond, but when told that it was time to stay at home and play with the baby, instead of flying into a fit of rage at the disappointment it good naturedly gave in and began building block houses on the floor with apparent contentment. Most amazing of all, at night when the lady bade it good night of its pleasure and desired to talk in peace, it was only necessary to tell it to go to bed at once, and it did as it was bidden without the slightest show of difficulty.

All From Missouri

"DETERMINED to secure this wonderful and rare animal at any cost, I waited until I could catch it alone, and addressed a letter to it off with to my proposes that if it would come with me it should live on chocolate creams, ride in automobiles and go to the circus every day, but its very character was my undoing.

"'Oh, no,' it replied: 'I have been forbidden to go anywhere with strange people and I always obey.'

"Such is my effort to introduce an unknown species of childhood to America followed.

"Do you believe that there is any such thing as an Obedient Child?" asked the bewildered company of each other.

"We have never seen one," was the reply, "and we are from Missouri."

How the Rich Live; Thousands In Favors and Banquet Freaks

By Cleveland Moffett

No. VIII.

AMONG the accessories of costly and ostentatious banquets such as I have been considering, I may add hand-painted menu cards, sometimes ordered weeks in advance from artists of repute; also souvenirs of considerable money value, diamond pins, gold bracelets, gold cigarette cases, fans, lockets, watch chains, etc., distributed among the guests like so many bonbons.

A Western speculator, whose vagaries keep him much in the public eye, gave a dinner some time ago at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, where four shares of United States Steel were quietly folded in the napkins, were laid at each plate.

Expensive Souvenirs

AND another Wall street magnate, being asked, I am told, with the charms of a young married woman, hit upon the way of making her accept a valuable present that he would not otherwise have dared to offer. He invited a pleasant company to dine with him at a conspicuous hotel, and, in the course of the meal, each lady received a beautiful jewelry worth two or three hundred dollars, but the "souvenir" given to the lady of his preference was worth a cool thousand. They say she gave the dining room with cheeks afire.

This recalls the Roman dinner described by Petronius, at which a certain number "the panels of the ceiling slid apart and disclosed hidden machinery, through dishes from a hogshead, was let down, having on the edges rows with jars of perfume hanging about its entire circumference. These were invited to accept as keepsakes."

Goldfish in Finger Bowls

THE sameness of this effort of the rich to be "different" is well shown in the case of the Western banquet. A wire said to have given a banquet with goldfish in the finger bowls and his monogram on the napkins (one for himself and one for his daughter) thought this a novelty, but we read in "Court Life of Louis XIV." that "at a great banquet there were at the Baboof the finest beaten gold floating around in gold and silver bowls filled with wine," and the Emperor Caligula is known to have "served pearls dissolved in vinegar to his guests, modeled in gold.

Nothing but gold dishes, I happened to be in Tiffany's recently and asked one of the silver men if he could duplicate a certain set of gold plates.

"Why, yes," he said, turning to a young man, said: "Bring me an after-dinner coffee set."

And presently the young man returned with a small tray holding a dozen "Three pieces—the tray, the coffee pot, the cream pitcher and the sugar bowl, all 18 karat gold—sold. The price is $3,000."

Ancient and Modern "Stunts"

NOR are we far behind the ancients in fantastic features of our banquets. Petronius relates that "a whole boar is served up with suckling pigs of pastry, a sow's udder and the hare and a number of little birds fly out into the room." But it is only a few years since a rich New Yorker gave a dinner party in his "studio," where an enormous chicken was brought in, and when the pie was opened not only did the fat fly forth, but a dozen scantily attired stepped out after them.

This gigantic pie brings to mind the pathetic story of a talented sculptor who, notwithstanding his abilities, found himself in the New York of to-day, and finally reached the point where he was obliged to model groups, busts and figure in the way of butter or blanc mange as decorative pieces for dinner parties. Sometimes, he told me, shortly hear of struggling architects making their living by the "cake" route, but only be repeating the lesson of history. For it was the famous French Revolution we read of a grand dinner given by Ledoux and an enormous cake covered with icing modelled into a fortress, complete in detail, all the buildings and gardens at Versailles. Even the lake was there, filled set with jewels to represent lights within, and all the landscape, although dimly seen, less tiny wax candles. It took a prominent artist two weeks to design it, and the cake cost over 6,000 francs.

The Craze for Gambling

A FRIEND of mine who visited Palm Beach during the fashionable Winter season gives me an instance of particular significance, since it shows that an intense desire to astonish is more powerful at these gatherings than an offer of cigarettes to the ladies. The "souvenirs" on this occasion were stacks of chips worth $15 each from the gambling tables of the nearby casino, where presently the guests were risking these chips (and more of their own, no doubt) for the alluring chances of faro and roulette

Which simply shows that we are following the ideas of past ages. Even in Rome in the days of Louis XIV.' that "at a great banquet there were at the Baboof the finest beaten gold floating around in gold and silver bowls filled with wine," and Emperor Caligula is known to have "served pearls dissolved in vinegar to his guests, modeled in gold.

What do you think they are?" asked the head man.

"Silver pins," I suggested.

"Hold it," he said, and he put the server in my hand, turning to a young man, said: "Bring me an after-dinner coffee set."

And presently the young man returned with a small tray holding a dozen "Three pieces—the tray, the coffee pot, the cream pitcher and the sugar bowl, all 18 karat gold—sold. The price is $3,000."

"THE HERITAGE OF HATE"

By Elizabeth Purcell

CHAPTER XLVII.—Continued

Copyright, 1907, by American Journal-Examiner.

PAULINE'S surprised and startled look told him that he had guessed rightly.

"How did you know?" she asked under her breath.

"There have been whispers concerning it flying about," he answered. "Nothing is actually known, but people quickly, seeing that the blood was oozing from her face. Keep the matter to yourself. I will see to the rest. Now, Pauline, you have nothing to feed on. It is merely supposed that Mrs. Heath knows something about Jack which is being carefully hushed up, and people are speculating as to what that something can be. I would not have spoken to you on the subject only that it stands as a barrier between us (now) I do not know what you have been told. How can you doubt Jack's honor so much as to fear anything that Wynn may offer that can malign say against him?"

"It is not I who fear," she returned hurriedly; "it is my father who fears it. He mistrusts Jack and Mrs. Heath, the power which is oppressing him. He has looked forward to getting Gilbert Wynn—who is the same with my stepmother. To no one now, except to my father and to his presence, would Pauline speak of Mrs. Heath as mother. She has been restless and irritable of late. And she hates me—hates me as much as she fears and loves her. My life is made a misery to me by her cruelty." She paused, and then relented: "I am doing wrong to be here, alfred," she said hurriedly, remembering that in three weeks' time I shall probably be Gilbert Wynn's wife, and that I am doing wrong to speak with you secretly like this. You say that you love me, and I do you mean that you will leave New York?"

"Yes. Do you think I could bear to stay and know that you were Gilbert Wynn's wife? Pauline, I could not bear to see you riding with him at Brighton—to see you driving with him at different houses—and know that he whom I do not believe to be a man of honor was the blessing that I have lost? I could not endure it, Pauline. I can heal myself, as others—under God's blessing—but I cannot heal the aching of my own heart. Not even Time, the greatest of all healers, will ever bring me comfort. I am nothing, if you send me from you."

She shivered, looking down, gently stroking the back of one of her waiting hands. Alfred Harding drew nearer to her again. At any other time those words of his concerning Gilbert Wynn—whom I do not believe to be a good man"—would have startled her, but she was absorbed in her to question him as to their significance; but now, in the tumult of her feelings, she let them pass unnoticed.

"Is it entirely on account of Jack that this unfortunate affair has taken place?" he asked in a subdued voice.

The words that Alfred Harding had once spoken to him, suggesting the possibility of Gilbert Wynn's actual guilt of the crime, murder for which Jack Heath, mother had suffered, recurred to his memory now with tremendous force. He had rejected the possibility then, but now it presented itself to him with a luminousness that inspired horror unspeakable. Pauline felt his hand suddenly clutched as it it inwardly, almost believing that it was a serpent, she reaches at a straw. If it were true, it would be horrible. If it were true, his marriage would not be.

"Yes," she was answering him meanwhile. "It is so that Mr. Wynn may refrain from publicly casting suspicion on Jack in connection with that fraudulent check. I understand from Jack himself that although, as I need not tell you," she lifted her head with a proud, confident smile, "he had nothing to do with that singular forgery of Mr. Wynn's signature, yet circumstances have contrived so oddly to point to him as guilty that he dreads the public exposure of the matter until he can find and vindicate himself completely. And it would be a terrible and intolerable thing for him to be tried upon the charge of a forgery attached in public to the Heath name."

"Terrible! Intolerable!" he repeated. Not worse than—

He broke off. He had begun the sentence mechanically, uttering his thoughts aloud, scarcely everything save the difficult situation in which he was placed, and the strong, terrible claim of his own heart upon her. "Not worse than murder" had been on the point of saying; but he checked the last word in time. Pauline looked up. "Not worse than what?" she asked in slight surprise.

"Nothing," he hastily replied. "I did not know what I was saying."

He stood silently gazing at her, his eyes burning down into hers, his face pale and set and grave. It seemed to him in those moments of doubt and trial the tumult little warm-hued russet lock that strayed over her pure forehead was dearer to him than life itself.

"Would it do any good if I were to speak to Mrs. Heath?" he asked presently. "It is inexplicable that she should not have spoken to you more deeply if he had nothing to do with the matter. Is there no way of getting at the circumstances for him and bring the real facts to light?"

Pauline shivered a little with a curious heart-sickness. "You can try," she said. "But I have told you how greatly changed he is, and the passion of suspicion and hate with which whose conduct has always been upright and honorable. Besides, he would shrink from any investigation of his actions during any hour of his life."

She spoke hurriedly and resumed her seat in the pony carriage. Alfred Harding, watching her every movements, was struck by the contrast between this Pauline Brighton and the gay, bright, and pathetic sadness that haunted her sweet face. Pauline loved her, his heart beating faster.

"Are we to say good-by, then, Pauline? Must I go away from you? If you say so, it will mean that I must go away from you forever."

She bind her hand upon his arm. He saw that her fingers were trembled.

"No! Pat," she murmured, with a thrill of appeal in her voice. "There are three weeks yet. Something may happen to prevent this marriage."

"I shall pray that it may be so," he replied, straightening himself as if with all the firmness of the resolve, and standing apart from her suspicious, manly spirit with the sunlight that penetrated through the interstices of the leaves above falling in wavering gleams across his features. "I shall pray that it may be so, and I shall—every legitimate and honorable means—to do away with the necessity for it. Meanwhile, God bless you for your love, Pauline. Whatever may befall, I shall reward her again. "If I were not sure that you loved me dearly, Pauline, I should not have the right to strive for you, or the courage still to hope."

CHAPTER XLVIII.

IN the afternoon of a later day, one of the finest days of that remarkably fine Summer, Sister Rachel sat on a bench in the grove that from the time set apart for her work among the sick poor and had made it her own. Nothing could be more unlike not often that she visited the substantial brick cottage, now the home of the marvellously gentle nurse with this strange, sorrowful woman who stood over him, her eyes lonely calling for justice.

Simple-minded, with strong faith though he was, and undiscerning in many ways, he had loved his friend, her benefactor, the man who had done his best to set up her shattered life anew. She went to grave now, holding out those hands that had been stained with blood, and the voice that volunteered good work. Her bonnet, the strings of which were tied under her chin, revealing the pitiful streaks of gray amid the dark-brown richness of her still luxuriant hair—this was the only touch of discordance.

"Come in, despair," she said, in a voice that was nevertheless steady under the weight of her woe. "I have tried everything—tried everywhere, done all that I have to do while still weak and hopeful; but all the accumulated anguish of my heart could not be equal to a doubt. To-morrow night we will discuss this matter again."

... A ... GRACEFUL HOUSE GOWN

No. 8,828—A comfortable fitting wrapper or house gown is an indispensable garment, and all women know the value of just such a one as here pictured. It is a graceful design, owing to its extreme simplicity. A choice of full length or elbow sleeves is given, and the neck may be in square out outline or finished by a high standing collar. Several materials are available, such as cashmere, flannel, dimity, lawn and China silk. For medium size will require 6¾ yards of 36-inch material.

No. 8,828—Sizes for 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure.

To obtain this pattern, postpaid, send 10 cents and the size, name and address to the BOSTON AMERICA PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass., allowing one week for delivery.

RUB BABIES' 'BON MOTS' BRIGHTEST IN COUNTRY

Wittiest Infant's Saying Brings $500 Lot—Have Your Little One Represented.

Do Boston babies say bright things? Some time ago the BOSTON AMERICAN started to ascertain the and make a collection of the bright sayings made by Boston babies.

That baby might realize the fact some day that he or she had been selected by impartial judges to have said the brightest thing on record in the BOSTON AMERICAN'S contest, a lot was purchased at Wellington Hillside, Dorchester, and is held until the brightest saying has been uttered.

That lot is worth to-day $5.... It is going to be worth more by the time that the baby has grown and is ready to receive the benefit of it.

Has your baby been entered in the contest? No? Then why?

Babies Say Bright Things.

All babies say bright things. Maybe you haven't realized that fact before. Stop and think over some of the remarks that the wee bit of humanity has made during the last few days. Don't you remember the saying that you laughed at so heartily and repeated to food to see the same time? To see the little one that she loves almost as if it were her own? What was it? Perhaps that witticism, so soon forgotten by you, may be decided by the judges to be the saying that ever Boston baby said.

Here's a Baby. But whether she has a winsome air not yet three years old. Frances went out one day when the cars were crowded and saw the people standing up holding out to the straps and swaying and bumping against each other like the Boston Elevated takes joy and profit in having them do.

Infantile Observation.

Miss Frances after long study remarks: "Those people hang on just like the monkeys, mamma, don't they?"

Theses a youthful observation for you. And the father who evidently doesn't hold any Boston Elevated stock, after mamma had told him about the remark, adds to the note he sent to the Baby Contest editor, "Will the railroads get wise and furnish seats to all passengers?"

It's a true safe bet that there are scores and scores of Boston babies who say things. Only trouble is to get hold of them. There are thousands in the hands of the BOSTON AMERICAN judges at present, but every baby should be heard from.

Enter Your Prodigy.

Fathers and mothers ought to find real enjoyment in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN'S baby page, where there are published every Sunday the sayings of the prettiest babies of the week and the bright things that were sent in. $2,100 in prizes for beauty and brightness in Baby-land. Your baby should be represented somewhere. Send in your photograph and get the title one in line for a $500 house lot.

Just to show what sort of things the Baby Contest editor gets such as these:

A STOP THE STILLNESS.

We were on a car coming from Revere to Boston when the car stopped for quite awhile. My little daughter Gladys, 4 years old, was quiet for a moment by the silence and then piped up, "Sing a song, Grandma, anything to stop the stillness."

TO HEAVEN FOR BABY

We have a little girl who is always saying bright things and just now she is very anxious for a baby. When she sees a new she cries for it. And she is always hoping one will be left at the house. Her first question on awaking in the morning is "Did the baby come?" Yesterday morning she became discouraged and told her papa she couldn't wait any longer.

"I am going to get a big ladder," she declared, "and go up to heaven and bring a baby down myself."

A PENNY SAVED

While walking with my niece, Ruth, aged five years, I passed a penny saying, "What will you buy for it, a horse and carriage or an automobile?" She thought a minute and then answered, "I won't buy anything. I'll give it to my papa. He'll save it."

CHRIST IS RISEN

My boy three years old had been eating a piece of toast which he enjoyed with the exception of the crust. Still holding the crust in his hand he asked his mother for more toast. "Why don't you eat what you have?" asked his mother. "There is no more toast on this," he replied looking at the crust.

WHAT OF THE REST?

My little son Leonard, three years and nine months old, was much interested in the funeral of a neighbor, whose first name was Michael. He asked his grandmother innumerable questions about death and the soul passing to Heaven, and finally said:

"Yes, the soul goes up to Heaven through the star holes, but what becomes of the Mike part?"

NO MISCHIEF NEEDED.

Our twins, Mary and Lucy, aged four years and nine months, were put to bed in an adjoining room, when Lucy, holding a picture calendar in her hand, was heard to say: "Ma-ma, I will tell how to make candy. A spoonful of white sugar and a spoonful of red sugar and a bag of flowers and a spoonful of Mentholatum, but don't put in any mischief."

Then in a moment she laughingly remarked, "Ma-we, it says here not to put any mischief in."

It should be explained that Mentholatum is a cure-all in our house, hence the familiarity with the word.

A YOUNG EX-VEYOR.

Our little boy, Bertrand, five years and nine months old, announced to his father, while he was eating dinner, that he wanted a bow and arrow. His father replied, "If you had a bow and arrow there would be too many boys with one eye out and too many windows broken around here."

"Oh, no," answered Bertrand, "I would stand in the street and shoot up and make holes in the sky and let the rain come down."

Then his father suggested, "Well, you could not go over to play if it rained all the time."

That set him thinking, for he loves to be out-doors, but he presently solved the problem and exclaimed, "Oh, pa, I would take another arrow and put some paper and glue on it and shoot it up to cover the hole."

LITTLE BITS OF BRAINS.

The other night, when we were having strawberries and cream, my little girl, six years old, asked me for a bit of cream. Knowing how she used to dislike cream, I said to her, "Alice, do you remember you used to hate cream?"

"Mamma," she asked seriously, "do you expect me to remember from last year? My brains aren't as big as yours. Mine are little bits of ones."

'HAPPY' HANNAH STEVENSON

ARRAIGN EVERETT TODAY IN DYNAMITE MYSTERY

SOUTH PARIS, Me., June 19.—Though strenuously denying that he had anything to do with the killing of Edgar L. Radcliffe, who was attacked with a knife and then blown up by dynamite at the Paris Hill mine, Wallace G. Everett, arrested on a charge of murder, appears in the South Paris Municipal Court to-day before Judge William M. Jones. He has secured A. S. Kimball of Norway and John P. Swasey of Canton as counsel.

The authorities state that they already have strong evidence against the accused, and that there will be sensational developments at the hearing to-day.

That the victim of the dynamite murder died directly as the result of the knife stab was emphatically stated by the physicians who performed the autopsy, and the wound one which could not be self-inflicted.

Search to-day failed to disclose a fuse or cap which exploded the dynamite, and to this mystery was added the statement by the workmen at the mine that the electrical batteries, which are used to ignite a blast, had not, as far as they could tell, been interfered with.

It developed to-day that the knife with what appears to be blood stains upon the blade was found by Everett himself, and was turned over to the authorities by some one at the Paris mine. Everett declares that he ever saw it before, but the officers are convinced that it is his property.

Once before Everett was arrested, charged with dynamiting a well, but an indictment was never returned against him, and to this case Radcliffe was summoned against him as the witness. For a time after this, it is said, the two men were sworn enemies, but later made up their differences, and Radcliffe made over his insurance policy to Everett.

Radcliffe's body was buried yesterday, and a short funeral service had already been performed after the Coroner's jury had returned a verdict of death by accident, no ceremony was held.

VINCENT GIRL BARS DISPLAY AT WEDDING

Favorite of Younger Set Bride of Samuel Huntington Wolcott To-day.

HONEYMOON ABROAD

"Happy" Hannah Stevenson, one of the most popular presidents that the Vincent Club ever had, will become Mrs. Samuel Huntington Wolcott this afternoon. The Vincent Club girls will all attend the wedding, which will be held at the country house of the bride's parents, Colonel and Mrs. Robert H. Stevenson at Readville.

The wedding will be of a simple character, but the attendance of the friends of the popular young couple will be very large. The groom is the second son of Mrs. Roger Wolcott. The bride is exceedingly pretty, amiable and wonderfully popular, and for several seasons has been one of the leading spirits of the Vincent Club.

The engagement was announced about three months ago, but came as no surprise to either their family or to any of their friends. Mr. Wolcott's devotion to the winsome Hannah dates back two years or more. Mrs. Robert Saltonstall of Readville (Caroline Stevenson) is the elder sister. C. G. Stevenson, Harvard '96, the golf champion, is one of the ushers, and Robert Stevenson, Jr., Harvard '07, the other.

Mr. Wolcott, who is one of the most popular young chaps about town, is a Harvard '02 man. The oldest brother, Roger Wolcott, married Claire Prince, the daughter of Dr. Morton Prince. Miss Cornelia Wolcott is the only sister.

The wedding takes place at 4 o'clock at the Stevenson country home in Readville, and is followed by an al fresco reception, for which the flne estate is admirably adapted.

Rev. Edward Revere Frothingham officiates, and the bride is given in marriage by her distinguished father.

Her gown is of white satin, trimmed with old family lace and her veil is of lace and is fastened to the hair with orange blossoms. Her only attendant is the groom's sister, Cornelia Wolcott, who is likewise his most intimate friend. There are no others. Prescott Wolcott is his brother's best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott go abroad for their honeymoon and upon their return will join the rapidly growing Milton colony of fashionable young married people.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS TO GIVE "LING LEAR"

The members of the graduating class of the South Boston High School and hosts of their friends will attend the annual commencement exercises which are to be held this evening under the direction of Head Master Augustus D. Small.

The pupils are to present as their part of the entertainment Shakespeare's "King Lear," from which who will take part are: Frederick J. Muldoon, Frank A. Burke, William V. Flaherty, Herbert T. Greeley, George F. Burns, Joseph T. Hart, Norman D. Nechtovich, Mary F. Thornton, Mary A. Manning and Margaret J. Lindsay.

STOP WOMAN AND CONSIDER

First, that almost every operation in our hospitals, performed upon women, becomes necessary because of neglect of such symptoms as Backache, Irregularities, Displacements, Pain in the Side, Dragging Sensations, Dizziness and Sleeplessness.

Second, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, has cured more cases of female ills than any other one medicine known. It regulates, strengthens and restores women's health and is invaluable in preparing women for child-birth and during the period of Change of Life.

Third, the great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time being published by special permission, give absolute evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

For more than 30 years has been curing Female Complaints, such as Dragging Sensations, Weak Back, Failing and Displacements, Inflammation and Ulceration, and Organic Diseases, and it dissolves and expels Tumors at an early stage.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. for advice. She is the Mrs. Pinkham who has been advising sick women free of charge for more than twenty years, and before that she assisted her mother-in-law, Lydia E. Pinkham in advising. Thus she is especially well qualified to guide sick women back to health. Write today, don't wait until too late.

SNAPSHOT MAN IS BUSY TODAY IN SOMERVILLE

The Snapshot Man is out with his camera to-day. He is seeking Somerville people, to whom he desires to award ten-dollar prizes.

You may be found in any part of Somerville. In fact, he is apt to be out over that city before he gets through. Snapshots will be made here and there, and perhaps you will be taken without knowing it.

Don't forget that if your picture is taken it may mean ten dollars to you. Better study the Somerville group in next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN very closely.

Snaps All Kinds of People.

Every day the Snapshot Man receives visitors who come in to claim the reward for having kindly got in the way of the camera when he was out looking for a picture of some ten. All sorts of people find their way to the camera plates. The camera has no limitations. Knows neither beauty nor ugliness in its line.

Of the Cambridge pictures published in last Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN a number have been identified. These names will be published in next Sunday's issue.

Yesterday two little children who represented good study specimens of youthful humanity were brought in by proud mothers. One of them, who assured that he was going to get the money, announced himself straight off what he was going to do with it.

"I'm going to buy me and my brother Jack a pair of shoes," he said. "Maybe we can get something else after that."

Winner Four Years Old.

He and Jack wear their shoes out very rapidly and they form the principal item of household expense. This lad is four years old and he and his brother are going to be a credit to the family.

Then there was another small chap, not yet three years old, who gravely shook the Snapshot Man's hand and said with the dignity of more mature years, "I thank you very much."

Those are two of the incidents that help make the Snapshot Man's job a pleasant one.

Somerville ought to produce a fine ten. Look for them in next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN. You may be one of the Ten.

MASKED LADY OF LEOPARDS BIG MYSTERY

Did you go down to Paragon Park with the SUNDAY AMERICAN coupon crowds yesterday or to-day?

The park opened Saturday, and the first AMERICAN guests went down there yesterday.

Manager Dodge claims that his open air circus is the greatest in New England. He asks you to look for yourself at the evening illuminations, to Barnes's great animal show and many other big features.

Already the curious are trying to pry into the disguise of the masked lady of the leopards, and to see if society woman with a fondness for wild beasts, or what not, will step and perform and be discovered.

Manager Dodge will christen the baby elephant, the cute little fellow that stands with outstretched trunk and begs for a penny and all comers.

The SUNDAY AMERICAN coupons for Paragon Park were good yesterday after noon and evening and are good for admission at 6 o'clock for admission and three shows. Next Sunday there will be printed a new set of coupons, also good for admission and three shows, different from those given this week.

CHAMBERLAIN IS BETTER.

LONDON, June 19.—Joseph Chamberlain, accompanied by his wife and Mrs. Endicott, arrived last evening from Birmingham. He stated that his health is improving.

DIVORCE EVIL AS BAD AS MORMONISM---GIBBONS

The July issue of the Delineator prints an important article on divorce question, by Cardinal Gibbons, in which, among other things, His Eminence says these things:

"The ever-growing facility with which divorce is procured in this country is an evil scarcely les deplorable than Mormonism—indeed, it is in some respects more dangerous than the latter, for divorce has the sanction of the civil law, which Mormonism has not. Is not the law of divorce modified form? Mormonism consists in a modified form? Mormonism consists in a simultaneous polygamy, while the law of divorce practically leads to successive polygamy.

"Each State has on its statute books a list of causes—or, rather, pretexts—which are recognized as sufficient ground for divorce. There are in all twenty-two or more causes, most of them a trifling character, and in some states, as in Illinois and Maine, the power of granting a divorce is left to the discretion of the judge.

"It is plainly manifest that the character of divorce is rapidly spreading over the community and undermining the founding of the nation. Unless the evil is checked by wholesome legislation the very existence of family life is imperilled. How can we call ourselves a Christian people if we violate one fundamental law of Christianity? And if the sanctity and indissolubility of marriage does not constitute a cardinal principle of the Christian religion, I am at a loss to know what does.

"Picture to yourself the fearful wrecks daily caused by this rock of scandal and the number of families that are cast adrift on the ocean of life.

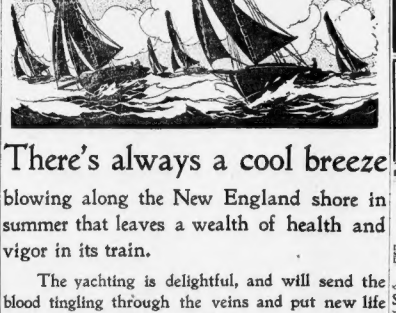
"Great stress is justly laid by moralists on the observance of the Sabbath. But what a mockery is the external repose of the Christian Sabbath to homes from which domestic peace is banished, where the mother's heart is broken and the father's spirit crushed, and where the children cannot cling to one of their parents without exciting the jealousy or hatred of the other.

"And these melancholy scenes are followed by the final act of the drama when the family ties are dissolved and hearts that had vowed eternal love and union are separated to meet no more.

"The facility with which marriage is annulled, is most injurious to the morals of the individuals, of the family and of society.

"It leads to ill-assorted and hasty marriages, because persons are less circumspect in making a compact which may afterward be dissolved almost at will.

"This social plague calls for a radical cure, and the remedy can be found only in the abolition of our mischievous legislation regarding divorce and in an honest application of the teachings of the Gospel."



There's always a cool breeze blowing along the New England shore in summer that leaves a wealth of health and vigor in its train.

The yachting is delightful, and will send the blood tingling through the veins and put new life and strength into the tired body.

The deep-sea fishing is a revelation, and offers a degree of excitement and adventure unparalleled.

Then there's a dip in the ocean, a loll on the sands, a stroll into the country, a dance in the casino—in fact, an endless fund of pleasure and recreation to be found nowhere else.

It's good for the summer—it's fine for a vacation—it's great for an over-Sunday trip.

Our beautifully illustrated booklet, "All Along Shore," tells all about it—where and how to go, what it will cost and what to see. A 2-cent stamp will bring it to you.

There are more surprises in baseball than in any other sport, and that is how the Pilgrims are going to beat the White Sox again this afternoon in the second meeting.

It will be a big surprise to the local fans and equally so to everybody else who follows the game in the East, but that was about the situation when the Champions got in appearance yesterday and got dumped most artistically.

It is an historical tradition that Boston teams always get either champion combinations, and there is reason for expecting similar happenings as was on the bill yesterday when the overconfident Westerners weakly picked up their bats a beaten team by the score of 6 to 3.

Sox Shy with Stick.

For a champion aggregation the Sox cannot claim any more prestige as batters than England's men, as they are particularly shy with the stick, and it was so in the world's series, but by excelling in other departments the team managed to get all the honors.

There isn't a .300 batter in the lot outside the battery men, and they don't appear in every game.

With other things equal there is no reason why the Pilgrims shouldn't make it interesting for the next three games.

It's evident that the Sox are chafing under the strain of the Naps pressing them so hard, and the least slip up means their displacement at the top of the list by Lajoie's men, and then it will be a duel between the two the like of which has not been seen in the history of the American League, as it is going to be a long race with speed on for many weeks in succession.

Joe Harris, the Melrose boy, may get his chance to show that he means business by McGuire letting him face the Sox to-day. He should be able to hold his own with Roy Patterson.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

First blood for the ex-champions.

* * *

Winter is a good Summer pitcher.

* * *

A win over the Sox has a better flavor than any other.

* * *

Nick Altrock was notified not to be so good natured as usual. Wonder why?

* * *

Jack Knight was forgiven for his erratic playing when he banged out the home run.

* * *

How the fans did squirm in their seats in the fourth as the errors came thick and fast.

* * *

And then the Sox began to hit in the fifth to add to the misery.

But what a difference in the second half of the fifth, and four runs came in. The buzz of exultation lasted after the side went out.

* * *

Three hits for Lou Criger was going some. That was worse than half of the total for the Sox.

* * *

Pat Dougherty pared the way for the win by fouling a ball into the foul fly while he was on fair ground and muffing it. The ball was directly in line but the force of Pat's rush made it roll foul.

* * *

Freddie Parent gets out of the bang of playing short by changing his body, throw the ball wild on a hit and it went into the bleachers, allowing Isbell to score a "home" run.

* * *

You don't see such clever fielding by pitchers in every game as that displayed by Altrock and Winter.

* * *

Pat Dougherty was well remembered when he came to the bat. Two hits and a run was Pat's contribution.

* * *

It was a witting day, and that fourth inning threatened to take all the starch out of the fans.

* * *

Only Winter's persistency in holding his control under the stressing circumstances prevented fatalities in the crowd.

* * *

"Bunk" Congalton showed that he knew how to lay down a bunt at the right time.

* * *

Trainer Charley Green swabbed the players off with a sponge between innings, a la ring style.

* * *

The scoreboard man was hot with the heat and got twisted with the runs and must have had a bet on the Sox.

* * *

England got an easy three-bagger when Dougherty and Jones let the ball drop between them.

In the third inning yesterday McFarland was on first when Altrock hit to Unglaub, who threw the ball into left field in an attempt to force McFarland. The latter kept on to third and Barrett's throw to Knight nearly caught the runner. This picture shows the play at third base.

WILL RACE AT WOONSOCKET, RAIN OR SHINE

Manager F. E. Sterens of the Woonsocket, R. I., race track is out with the announcement of a meeting July 9-13 inclusive, with purses of $300, to which the entries close July 1 for the following classes:

Trotting, 2:30, 2:27, 2:24, 2:21, 2:19, 2:16 and 2:14; pacing, 2:29, 2:24, 2:20, 2:17, 2:14, 2:11, and free-for-all.

A new departure from the customary run of state harness horse racing is that the programme will be carried out, rain or shine, there being no postponements on account of bad weather. The benefits gained by this move is apparent to all, and marks Manager Sterens as a pioneer among racing promotors.

If is, too, assured that all racing privileges will be permitted during the meeting, which is the rank and file of horsemen is good news. Last year Rhode Island was tied up in this respect, costing the State the loss of patronage derived usually from the numerous meetings held within its borders.

Special to the Boston American.

CHICAGO, June 19.—It will probably be some time before Frank Pfeffer, one of the star members of the Doves' pitching staff, returns to the game, and by his absence the Boston National team will undoubtedly be greatly handicapped, as the big fellow has been twirling good ball this season.

In yesterday's game, while pitching to Manager Frank Chance of the Cubs, Pfeffer ruptured one of the tendons of his pitching arm and had to retire in favor of Guy Dorner.

Manager Tenney is very much grieved at the injury to Pfeffer, and says it will make a big difference to the team if Pfeffer has to stay out of the game for a long time, as he is one of the pitchers on whom the Doves depend to land a place in the first division.

Flaherty or Lindaman is slated for the pitchers' role to-day, while Carter or Landgren is scheduled by the locals.

JIMMY WALSH LOSES BOUT WITH WEEKS

DENVER, June 19.—Jimmy Walsh of Boston lost the decision in a ten-round bout in Freddie Weeks of Cripple Creek, the latter weighing the Hub fighter by at least ten pounds. There came near being no fight, owing to the small size of the house, but the management of the club made up a purse of $1,000 and gave it to the Boston boy, who refused to go on unless given a substantial reward.

BRESNAHAN IS GETTING WELL

CINCINNATI, June 19.—Roger Bresnahan, catcher for the New York National League ball club, who was struck by a pitched ball yesterday afternoon, was reported improving and resting well at Stetson Hospital to-day. It was feared at first that Bresnahan was seriously hurt, but is now believed that he will be all right after a few days' rest.

HUB AUTO DEALERS TO GIVE BLIND CHILDREN A RIDE

By J. C. KERRISON.

Something like 100 inmates of the Kindergarten for the Blind at Jamaica Plain will to-morrow be furnished with an automobile ride to Sharon by the members of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association. Upon their arrival at Sharon they will be entertained at luncheon by M. R. Deming, superintendent of the Boston Industrial Seashore Home, who for the last three years has annually brought about this meeting of the dealers and the blind children. The outing of to-morrow is another of the dealers all delight in assisting, and many of them have contributed the use of cars when such caused the disappointment of prospective customers. Secretary Chester I. Campbell of the Automobile Association, who is arranging for the cars, said this morning that he would scarcely take transportation facilities for over 100 of the blind children.

* * *

Although Harry Fosdick will on July 1 take up his association with the Hol-Tan Company in New York, the change will have no effect upon the local house of Harry Fosdick Company. The personnel of that company will remain the same, Alfred N. Robbins taking the presidency and Lincoln D. Robbins the treasurership, while Harry Fosdick will remain on the directorate. The business of the company, and in fact the entire affairs of the local company, will remain exactly the same as heretofore. The Harry Fosdick Company has been particularly successful since its organization, and the way things now look it should continue to enjoy a high degree of business successes for years to come. Mr. Fosdick, of course, will remain in New York entirely, leaving full work than his partners, Alfred N. and Lincoln D. Robbins, are perfectly competent to care for the wants of the company's old as well as new customers.

* * *

A meeting of the automobile committee having in charge the automobile numbers of the old-home week in Boston will be held at the Old South building this afternoon. Almost every dealer in Boston is a member of the committee and they should be able to get out a good-sized crowd. It might be a good thing for the Bay State Automobile Association to hold a hill climbing contest on some one day of the Old Home Week.

Walter Christie will not only put to the test the front drive construction of his 120-horsepower racer in the Grand Prix in France, July 2, but he will again try out in a hard race his own removable rim. He is using Diamond tires as in former races, the sizes being larger, however, than before, 34x4½ front and 34x4 rear. He took with him three complete sets of Diamond tires, all mounted on his own removable rims.

HARVARD CREW GIVES WRAY ANXIETY

NEW LONDON, June 19.—Harvard's whole squad was taken in hand by Coach Jim Wray at 6 o'clock last night, the half dozen crews paddling down toward the naval station and returning an hour and a half later after being put through some hard paces. The varsity eight is causing Wray considerable anxiety. The crew is not rowing as well as he would like, and even at this stage of the game there are rumors about both camps that a shakeup is imminent. In the morning the vacsity and freshmen four had a brush for about a mile and the freshmen won, repeating their performance of last week.

This trial evidently nettled the Crimson coach, for a change was noted in the varsity four, Rurchard taking Ausberg's seat at 3, Burton the freshman at 4, who had hostilities instead of mumps, as was feared, is rowing again, but Wyman, who has just returned from the hospital, is not sure of getting his place at 5 back again. Charlie Morgan, the Harvard varsity substitute who injured the base of his spine on Sunday evening by stumbling over a ball bat, left for Boston this afternoon to have an operation performed, an abscess having formed, it is reported, since the accident.

Yale's crews had a letup in their practice, the morning maneuvres being very light while the longest row, at 6:30 o'clock last evening, was taken by the varsity eight, that went down the course for two miles at a twenty-stak clip, and returned at the same gait a few minutes later.

TWO DAYS OF SPEEDWAY RACING OLD HOME WEEK

It will not be the fault of the racing committee in charge during Old Home Week if the admirers of amateur and outdoor sport furnished by the light harness horse do not have speedway racing enough to please the most exacting enthusiast.

Following out this plan the committee at its last meeting agreed it would be good policy to have two days of racing during the week, one at Charles River speedway and the other over the Franklin Field course, but on just which days was not fully settled on.

However, Tuesday, July 30 and Friday, August 2, were partly agreed upon as being the most apt days, the former being for the grand parade and horse show.

The committee agreed to forward invitations to all the driving clubs located in the State, asking them to send along their horses, the more the merrier, and enjoy the hospitality of Boston Old Home Week.

All horses entered will be classed by the committee strictly according to their merits of speeds, and not according to whatever record they may have, and to the winners of every event will be awarded costly silver cups; in fact, the trophies will be the most expensive ever given for speedway racing in the country.

To be certain that everybody will be taken care of satisfactorily both during the matinee and the remaining days of the week the racing committee has been enlarged to the fifty private members of the Boston Driving Club. Originally were picked representatives from the Boston Metropolitan and Dorchester Driving Clubs, some four from each, but there were not considered sufficient to cover all detail coming under the head of matinee and speedway racing.

MORE SONDER CLASS TRIALS ON TO-DAY

Special to the Boston American.

MARBLEHEAD, June 19.—Three races will probably be held to-day, and the first on Friday in the elimination trials of the sonder class, for the selection of the boats to represent America in the international race in Germany next month. Much to the surprise of the yacht racing fans, the old boats were the successful ones in the trials yesterday. Three races were sailed, five new boats started, and two of last year's build, but the "old timers" won them all.

The Spokane, owned by Vice Commodore F. Lewis Clark of the Eastern Yacht club, beat the Sally VIII, owned by A. R. Loring, in the second and the Wakeda II the third, with the Sally a very close second.

YALE TEAM TO PRACTICE HERE

Captain Dexter will probably play third base for Harvard in the first game of the series with Yale next Saturday at Soldiers Field, owing to the absence of Leonard, who will probably take Dexter's place in left field.

The Yale nine, which is quartered at the Hotel Lenox, will be given practice at Soldiers Field to-day. Coach Billy Reagan says that Parsons or Van Gerbig will pitch to-morrow, and the rest of the team will be about the same as in the Princeton series.

JOE WALCOTT GETS A DRAW

BRAZIL, Ind., June 19.—Referee Hugo Kelly decided the ten-round bout between Joe Walcott, who made his first appearance here ring since his loss of the welterweight title to Honey Melody last Winter, and Mike Donovan of Rochester, a draw. The mill was rather a tame affair.

AGE EARNERS URGE LEAGUE TO ENTER FIGHT

Resolutions avowing their allegiance to the Independence League in its efforts to put an end to political corruption were unanimously adopted at a smoke talk for wage earners of Ward 21 last night in Warren Hall, Roxbury. The resolutions are as follows:

"Whereas, we believe that in the interests of all citizens, those who labor as well as those not technically known as wage earners, in the present city and political conditions come into being, and

"Whereas, the Independence League offers to those who do so an immediate prospect for a purer civic future a more equal distribution of privileges and appointments, better and more disinterested legislation; therefore, be it

"Resolved, that it is the sense of this meeting that the Independence League nominate a complete ticket for all offices at the next State and city elections in an effort to bring about the defeat of selfish and corrupt officials and so-called representatives of the people; and be it further

"Resolved, that a State and city government is not wholly controlled by public service corporations, seeking to take without recompense franchises belonging to the community, and by professional politicians dependent on fraud and deceiving citizens with fake promises and no performance.

"Protection Against Graft."

John N. Pease, financial secretary of the Wage Earners' Central Club, presided. The speakers were: Former Mayor Thomas H. Sates, Junius T. Auerbach, the well-known lawyer, and Robert A. Allen, chairman of the Boston city committee of the Independence League.

Mr. Auerbach declared that both at the State House and at city Hall representatives of the two big parties "sell every year vote for special privileges for the corporations. "They are doing it in Boston in the city government to-day," he said, "to accomplish a great deal for the people, but they never do." Mr. Auerbach called attention to the fact that the Independence League cast 38,000 votes in the last election, enough votes to give it the balance of power. "One of the cardinal principles of the League," he said, "is to bring all the organized labor, in the handling together of the wage earners to politics by voting."

Ex-Senator Bates took for his subject the editorial in yesterday's BOSTON AMERICAN, headed: "What Chance Has Real Democracy? Where Leaders Sell the Rank and File, the Party Is Diseased, Dangerously, If Not Fatally."

A Strong Argument.

"I declare without fear of contradiction," he said, "that that is one of the strongest arguments that could possibly be put forth for the existence of the Independence League as a distinct political organization. That editorial gives you all the reasons why men should depart from the two old parties and join hands therewith with an organization that gives every chance for expression of independent action in the past, and of cleaning out of the public offices of the city, State and nation the federal government the corrupt rascals and scoundrels who live and have lived upon public patronage."

TO AID BOSTON CLEAN STREETS

CHICAGO, June 19.—Richard T. Fox, expert on street cleaning, who was brought from New York to Chicago to tell how the work should be done and did so well that he was retained, will now go to Boston and investigate the street cleaning problem in the Hub.

He will depart in a few days, or as soon as his affairs can be arranged to permit a vacation.

STORM ROBBED TOWN OF LIGHT

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 19.—The worst electrical storm which has visited this city for a great many years prevailed here for two hours yesterday. A succession of showers, accompanied by violent lightning, set the city plunged in total darkness, did much damage to electric light and telephone wires, and tied up the street car system. The first storm started at 9:30 and four followed it.

Cold Piano Facts

We don't make any pianos. We don't advertise any special pianos. We have nothing special to say about any piano in particular. The Piano Trust is fighting us and we are fighting the Piano Trust tooth and nail. We ask no questions—we simply sell—and we give none. Trust pianos are fine, in fact some of the finest pianos in the world are in the Trust, and we sell these same pianos every week at Trust-fighting prices—ever, away lower by many dollars than you can buy them any place in this wide world. We lose money, they say. Well, that's our business. What do you care? You buy while the fight is on; never mind our losses. We'll take care of ourselves. Come this week and see the fight.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

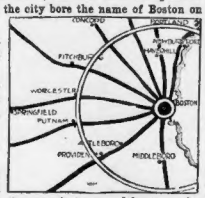
80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JUNE 19, 1907.

THE PASSING OF THE HUB

In the old days they called Boston the Hub.

Those were days worth living in. Thirty-five railroads, scattered through New England and the United States, then had their headquarters here. Nearly all the roads entering the city bore the name of Boston on their cars.

Take a look at this little diagram and you will see why they called it the Hub.



Every one of those railroads was a spoke in the wheel of commerce of which Boston was and still is, BY NATURE, the centre.

But new times, new manners, new men.

With the coming of the Trusts the hard-headed Yankee railroad presidents of which a former generation was justly proud have one by one silently folded their check books and passed on.

One by one the little roads have been swallowed by the bigger ones. One by one the bigger roads have been gulped down by others still larger, and now, in this year of trusts, 1907, we are to see the whole New England railroad system sucked into the maw of the Standard Oil Company.

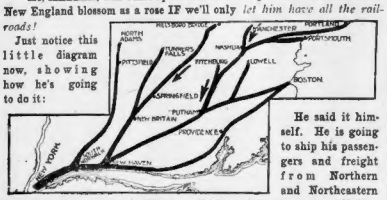
And who are the new men who go with these new times and these new manners?

Here they are:

Charles S. Mellen.

Mellen is all, and in all, and he'll DO it all. Has he not promised? He, MELLEN, will build up the traffic of the port of Boston and make New England blossom as a rose IF we'll only let him have all the railroads!

Just notice this little diagram now, showing how he's going to do it:



He said it himself. He is going to ship his passengers and freight from Northern and Northeastern New England by way of the Merrimac Valley and the Connecticut Valley; Nashua and Worcester and Springfield.

Just take any ordinary map of New England and trace on it the lines that Mr. Mellen purposes to convert into trunk lines and you will find they look like this diagram.

They converge at New Haven instead of at Boston.

They are "feeders" for New York instead of for the metropolis of New England.

Then what will become of the HUB?

It will be done for. It will no longer BE a hub. It will be a fragment of a rim in a wheel the centre of which will be the HEADQUARTERS OF THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY.

Mellen's New Through Lines.

(From President Mellen's Letter to Governor Guild, June 4, 1907.)

IT is our confident belief an increased service, without transfer through the Connecticut Valley, through the union of these properties under a common control and ultimately by consolidation, will result in the development of a largely increased revenue through the greater convenience available.

Similarly a through service by way of Worcester and Nashua through the Merrimac Valley cannot fail to benefit materially the public, with resulting advantage to the revenue of the railroad.

A through service to and from the State of Maine offers possibilities for revenue not to be lightly considered—possibilities so large with such a field for exploitation so near at hand it seems little doubt should be expressed of the result.

We CAN'T Describe Day's Face

When It Sees Standard Oil It Radiates Pure Bliss

Mr. Day, the large, heavy chancellor of Syracuse University, has again been talking about the persecuted millionaires and shedding tears of solid standard oil over their woes.

His latest tearful appeal for the Standard Oil people and for all others with money to give TO COLLEGE CHANCELLORS isn't new or worth reprinting.

It is simply a wild denunciation of every human being who dares to think that a MAN amounts to anything in comparison with a real DOLLAR.

One of our readers writes:

"Why don't you tell about this man as he really is—let the people know what he is like?"

We should like to do it, but it can't be done. We have seen Chancellor Day at his very best and happiest. He was at his happiest, for he was looking at the little figure of Mr. Archbold, the Standard Oil man that gives Mr. Day the money.

Mr. Archbold, a quiet, concentrated little person, was holding out hopes of much larger donations to Syracuse later on.

Do you suppose that any words, any painting, any sculptured marble could reproduce the face of Chancellor Day as he listened with both ears pricked forward?

Sometimes in the West the farmer goes off to the fair and is gone all day. It is late in the evening, the sun has gone down and the moon has risen before he returns to pour the ears of corn in over the side of the sty.

Before the corn begins to fall there is lifted up a pathetic face, eagerly waiting. Unless you have seen that fat, starved face lifted toward the farmer, above the trough below, eager, patient, happy and grateful in the pale moonlight, you can't possibly know what Chancellor Day, of Syracuse University, looks like when he sees a rich man that is apt to give some money.

We have been asked to advise parents against sending their sons to Syracuse University, but we shall not so advise them.

A decent American boy will take the good and leave the bad. He can SEE the heavy face above the trough and hear the grunting without wanting to grunt or look LIKE it.

By Wex Jones

WHAT are the wild waves saying,
Sister, the whole day long?
What is the constant burden
Of the never-ending song?

THEY are uttering loud denials
Denying in every shout
That any one checked a speaker
With an order to "cut it out."

WHAT are the wild waves saying,
Sister, the way they screech?
What makes the waves so angry
They batter the poor old beach?

THEY are calling the man a fakir,
Who says that a clam can't talk;
They are branding as false the story
That a flounder won't go for a walk.

WHAT are the wild waves saying,
Sister, in accents riled?
Why are they always denying?
Sister, what makes them wild?

THEY are busy denying the stories
Put out by unqualified knaves;
They are wild when they're contradicted,
Being all of them practical waves.

Why and Wherefore

In Boston, 1707

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Will you please publish in your paper the date on which the U. S. Constitution was launched and where.

(The Constitution was launched October 21, 1797, at Hallard & Hart's yards, Boston, which was near Constitution Wharf of the present day.)

Condition of India

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Sir—Apropos of the present unrest in India, I am reminded to ask if it is true, as is claimed in certain quarters, that British rule in India is a curse to the natives and that the condition of the Indian people is distressingly bad? May I hope to get a word from the AMERICAN on this subject?

READER.

(Two or three years ago a book was published in London entitled "Prosperous British India," by William Digby. In the course of his work the author said that the income of the non-official population—that is of more than 226,000,000 of people—was "one pound sterling per head per annum, or less than a penny a day." In the preface to his book he says: "Steel your hearts for that which you shall see and hear, for you will gaze upon a sum of human misery and will contemplate a mental and spiritual degradation the like of which is nowhere else at this moment to be seen, and probably was at no time during recorded history anywhere to be witnessed.")

Marshal Ney

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Sir—Will you inform me if there is any available testimony to the effect that Marshal Ney was never court-martialed and shot, but escaped to the United States and passed the closing years of his life in this country under an assumed name? W. J. TILLEY.

(There is no such testimony. Various attempts have been made along the line indicated by your question, but they drove nothing.)

A Wife Can Make or Unmake Her Husband

By Rev. Albert E. George

"WOMEN prefer a good job to an indifferent husband," recently said President Pritchett of the Massachusetts School of Technology.

Women much rather prefer the husband, and the indifference that comes up afterward is overcome by a good job. This arrangement is more likely to be true.

What is an indifferent husband? A husband that has not been skilfully managed by his wife. During courtship the man and the woman reach the summit of their respective attractiveness. After marriage, the art of being attractive to each other is very important. So important is this that a woman has it within her natural gifts to ward off the so-called indifference of her partner in life.

No woman should put a good job in advance of an indifferent husband. That is to say, she should not see this prospective ahead of her, because she happens to have a certain married couple in mind where the husband is apparently of this make-up.

A wife makes her husband largely what he is, and can prevent him from being what he ought not to be. When "hubby" gets into this quiescent mood, it is within her province to awake him out of his sleep by her unique methods of love and devotion.

The mere possibility of allowing a husband to sink into an atmosphere of "don't-careism" reflects poor management upon her.

Has a wife no influence over her husband, or, rather, is she not shrewd enough or capable in her methods to tune up the feelings of her partner?

Woman does prefer the husband, and in the generality of cases husbands are much better for the constant vigilance and good advice of their wives.

A wife can make or unmake her husband. Naturally endowed with a particular type of influence, she can really master the husband's whims and make him see his duty, if she only goes about it in the right way.

The woman who dares to choose to cling to a good job and fears an indifferent husband, does not deserve any kind of a husband.

Woman wants more confidence in her own powers. Some have this to an unlimited degree and might, with good results, dispense it to others who are still fondling the good job.

But the idea of a woman speculating over a good job and dreading to tackle an indifferent husband is really absurd—for nothing shows to a better advantage than a woman waving her wand over her husband and getting him into a meritable shape.

This is not one of the lost arts and no good job should interfere with it.

Old Tom Otway had the right idea. Hear him:

"O woman, lovely woman! Nature made thee
To temper man: We had been brutes without you
Angels were painted fair to look like you."

When a woman tries to analyze her feelings, ten to one she is in love! When a man does it, ten to one he is not.—ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Still Bigger Game In San Francisco

THE San Francisco forces of reform should not be satisfied with the conviction of that city's Mayor. That criminal official was found guilty of extorting tribute money from divers.

But these red-light restaurants injured only a dissipated minority of the people. The masses in San Francisco, as throughout this nation, are normal. They do not find their delight in places of infamy.

While nothing can extenuate Schmitz's collusion with the promoters of vice, these transactions cannot compare with the colossal bribery of officials and plunder of the whole people practised by the heads of the public service corporations in the West.

Like the trust brigands now operating in New England, the indicted financiers of San Francisco are conducting an adroit campaign. In the relation over the conviction of Schmitz the people of California should be careful lest the corrupt magnates whose operations have wronged the entire public escape the fate of the Mayor.

They are mobilizing for a fight. The Southern Pacific, which during an entire generation has enjoyed a practical railway monopoly in California and has debauched the State's civic life, is managing the defence of the corporation leaders.

Western Legislatures have been purchased by the Southern Pacific, as if they were common merchandise. Courts have been corrupted. The poisonous influence of this corporation has tainted the press.

In San Francisco the traction lines succeeded in stealing franchises from the public by distributing bribes among the infamous supervisors. By the same kind of criminal politics the telephone company was able to keep out competition.

These and numberless similar crimes should not go unpunished. Schmitz was merely a creature. All the conspirators that found him serviceable must follow him to jail, or the whole prosecution of San Francisco graft will be little better than a failure.
